Wealth Isn't Concentrated; New Deal is Old!

To the Editor:

In your editorial in the issue of August 5, you ask a question. In brief, it was this: Why is it that all big business, corporations and banks are against the New Deal and all for Landon? Your answer is that Landon would be too weak to carry on the New Deal, so these big boys could then do as they please. In other articles you have stated that the New Deal is in favor of the poor man, the average man, the forgotten man, the man who is against the pro-Roosevelt party picture Roosevelt as the great champion of the down-trodden and the oppressed.

Let us analyze this New Deal and trace its origin.

This new deal, or "square deal," as Theodore Roosevelt called it, for the common people, is centuries old, and is a matter of evolution. It dates at least as far back as the beginning of the 18th century, when King John of England signed the Magna Charter, which laid the first permanent foundation of British freedom.

The abolition of the sweat shop and child labor, the eight-hour law, strictly enforced in all industries in England, free compulsory education, better sanitary conditions in the industries, the right of organizing strikes, abolition of imprisonment for debt, the Sherman anti-trust law, the workman's compensation act, are just a few examples of the evolution of the new deal in favor of the poor, or average man.

The average business man and the workingman has it far better now than in the days of Mark Hanna and Jay Gould. Nor is wealth as concentrated as it was then; statistics prove that, in spite of the popular idea to the contrary.

Of course, as you say, Mr. Editor, Landon is for the New Deal, or better for the average man. All good and great men want to do their bit toward making a nation a better place for the average man to live in. That's all O. K. Let's forget it.

But what millions of people do not forget is that Roosevelt has spent for 20 and 30 billions of the tax payers' money in boondoggling, salaries and huge expenditures on useless work. They don't forget that he has been paying millions of dollars to his little farmers to let their land lie idle, turn under crops and raise less pigs. The results will be terrible high food prices and millions will be on the verge of starvation in the big cities.

Urge the right of self-government for the states as the president tried to do through the NRA and other means leading to a dictatorship, but thanks to the supreme court it was stopped.

President Roosevelt has brought himself into favor by lavishly spending the nation's money. The president is a kind-hearted, would-be reformer, albeit rather dictatorial. But psychologically it is his love of approbation that is his besetting sin. A little love of approbation is a good thing, but when it is an obsession of other people's money, disaster and pride before a fall.

Mr. Editor: I admire your broad-mindedness in paying a columnist to hammer away against the Roosevelt New Deal, so your readers can judge for themselves.

You're a fighter. SYDNEY S. BARKER, Eagle Point, August 9.

Communications

High Taxes Inevitable. To the Editor:

The bitter hatred of Roosevelt is a sign of the times and its significance, as I suspect, is more economic than political.

It grows out of the problem of unemployment and the problem of tax payment. It is more and more with us. New machines are continually being invented and brought into use and every new machine, whatever its benefits otherwise, throws more men out of the jobs whereby they have been earning their living.

Nor does it need the eye of prophecy to foresee that the millions now unemployed will never again, to any extent, find work in private industry. For if good times come back, as we like to believe they are coming, they will mean more machines and not more jobs. If these millions are employed they will have to be employed in public works.

So we face an era of gigantic undertakings in that kind. Some employed many men as soldiers and when they weren't soldiering they built roads. Happily, for the present at least, we haven't much use for soldiers, but roads are always useful.

Then there are the ship canals waiting to be dug and the tideswaters waiting to be harnessed, developments here and developments there, no end.

At an enormous cost. The era which we face will be an era of taxes vastly higher than any ever known in the history of the world. These taxes will be paid by those of us who have the wherewithal to pay, and particularly those of us whom the machine age is making rich. To them, needless to say, the coming era, in that aspect, will be exceedingly unwelcome, and to the extent that it is forehanded in Roosevelt's New Deal, they have their reason for hating Roosevelt.

It remains to be seen whether they can stave off the inevitable by discrediting its avant courier.

RAMSEY BENSON, Ashland, 12 of August.

Applegate. APPLEGATE, Aug. 14.—(Sp.)—Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Short and daughter of Ashland motored to Yale creek last Sunday where they visited with Mrs. R. S. Burchard.

Mr. Dale Hartley and little daughter Dale Arlene of Medford are spending several days at the home of little Dale Arlene's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hartley.

Among those from Little Applegate employed in the fruit work are Mrs. Irene Crump and Mrs. Pearl Dunford. They are working at the Bear Creek packing house.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie West of the Dead Indian country were visiting relatives on Little Applegate last Sunday.

Those attending the Homemakers' camp at Camp Savage last week visited with Opal Mooter, teacher last year at Ruch and who will teach there again next year. Miss Mooter has a homestead on Savage creek and came to camp one day.

Mrs. Harley Perkins and children have moved to Klamath Falls to make their home. Mr. Perkins has employment at Salem.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred House of upper Big Applegate sold their home there and have moved to Talent. Mr. Schley of Quinalt, Wash., bought this place and plans to build a summer home there.

Word was received here that Mrs. Ruth Sanburn, who left here July 29 for San Diego, didn't have a very successful journey. Mrs. Sanburn made the trip by bus and at Bakersfield, Cal., was overcome by the heat. She was placed in a hospital there and word sent to her daughter at San Diego, who came after her.
