

NO EMERGENCY IN P-I STRIKE SAYS GOVERNOR MARTIN

Washington Executive Puts Responsibility for Law and Order On Regular City and County Officials

SEATTLE, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Gov. Clarence D. Martin laid responsibility for maintaining order in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer's nine-day-old newsroom strike today at the doors of municipal and King county authorities. Declaring "law and order have not failed in Seattle," the governor in a radio address at Portland, Ore., last night said he saw no occasion to "talk of use of the state patrol," or "even to think of the national guard."

He lashed out at what he called an "inflammatory editorial" dealing with the strike called by the Seattle chapter of the American Newspaper Guild August 13 in protest against the discharge of two guild members who, newspaper executives asserted, were dismissed for cause.

At the same time, the governor expressed the hope arbitration could be effected and tendered his services toward a "better understanding and peaceful settlement" of the strike. Guild pickets continued to patrol the closed plant and a few police were on hand, with no external indications of trouble. Neither was there any intimation from either the newspaper or guild executives that the end of the deadlock was in sight, or negotiations of any kind were under way.

The governor, commenting he found most labor leaders and employers willing to arbitrate, added: "Unfortunately, there are invariably some headstrong men on both sides who, matching hatred for open shop with hatred for the closed shop, refuse to confer with open minds, refuse to consider the rights, claims and problems of the other fellow across the table."

Too Stubborn "Then, because they are stubborn, they provoke and prolong disputes, and thus open the way for those who are looking for a chance to threaten, to intimidate and even to resort to physical violence."

"Frankly, these men are the first to turn to the governor to exact assurances of indifference or promises of protection. . . . They want to fight."

He enlarged upon the recognition of collective bargaining right by saying: "When employees agree to work, whether among themselves or with the employer, they are entitled to work—without being molested, without intimidation in their homes. This right to work must and will be respected."

When printers, pressmen and other mechanical departments employees sought admittance to the plant the first day, they were turned back by pickets and the newspaper's suspension followed. Typographical and pressmen union heads said the men were unable, though willing, to fulfill contractual obligations.

Hearst States Stand In a statement from Rome, Italy, William Randolph Hearst, publisher of the P-I, said: "It has cost me over a million dollars to conduct my paper in Seattle all through the depression and up to date."

"If the communists want to relieve me of that cost and of the duty of supplying jobs to labor, it is not an unmitigated evil. I would save money."

"However, there is a greater issue at stake than saving money. "There is the issue of a free press and a free country. "No press is free that is subject to mob rule. "No country is free where the public officials are too cowardly or too corrupt to protect the fundamental rights of loyal and law-abiding citizens."

Charges of trade union violence made by the Hearst management were denied in an American Newspaper Guild statement issued in New York signed by Heywood Brown, international president.

He accused the Hearst management of "filling downtown Seattle hotels with armed men, termed 'loyal workers' imported from Los Angeles and San Francisco," and through radio programs attempting "to incite a spirit of mob violence against the duly constituted authorities of the city because they have refused to condone the reign of terror which Hearst has already instituted."
