Claims Motor Law Unfair
To the Editor:
As one of those affected, this writer would like to point out a few facts regarding the motor vehicle laws of Oregon, and to informally lodge a complaint of injustice.

All out of state automobiles are required to register before they can be operated in this state longer than twenty-four hours. A note on the official permit states that such permit is void after the owner becomes a "resident" of this state. (I have reference to your motor vehicle amendment to your motor vehicle law states in effect: "Such permit is void after said owner becomes gainfully employed within this state.") Thereby your law distinguishes against the itinerant workers who come here to help harvest crops, without whose help the growers and shippers of the state would be liable to considerable loss from over-maturing of products.

Further, your law defines "resident" as a person who has resided within the state for a period of not less than two years. Furthermore, your law makes no provision for punishment of those caught operating their car with the old tags while "gainfully employed." Thereby allowing the proper officials to charge them whatever their conscience, or lack of conscience, dictates.

This writer charges that such discrimination is unfair to the itinerant workers from another state in that most other states respect Oregon licenses for at least six weeks, regardless of whether the owner works or sleeps.

Of all classes who may come visiting your state, the itinerant worker is more helpful and less expensive to the community, and, at the same time less able to stand the cost of two or three sets of license plates a year for his car.

In this class there is even an unfair discrimination against the worker who finds it necessary to work in the country where he must drive to work, as compared with those more fortunate who work in town, do not drive, and thereby avoid having to pay a license fee.

Statistics are nice to hear about, and a pain in the neck to compile, so this writer will confine their mention to hearsay, or supposition. No doubt the chamber of commerce can say just how much money out of state travelers spend in Oregon each year. But, we very much doubt if they have any yard-stick for measuring the value of help from itinerant workers who visit the state each year. Mr. Babson could probably state pretty clearly how much of the tourists' money was derived, directly or indirectly, from Oregon sources, (profits on goods exported or imported by this state) and how it all compared with the amount of money spent elsewhere by Oregon residents out of town.

We can't believe that even Mr. Babson can tell us how much of the money earned in this state by itinerant workers is spent in this state. And we will challenge him even further to compare that figure with the amount of money earned, spent, and brought out of other states by itinerant workers originating in Oregon.

Of some two hundred cars which itinerant workers bring into this state, it is safe to say that not more than one-fifth of them buy Oregon tags; the others being set up and not used for the few weeks that the owners are employed here.

Any oil company could probably give us some statistics on how much this state loses in that transaction through loss of gasoline tax.

Now, we are not kicking at the state; it's a pretty good old state, and many of us call it home. We are not hinting that we be made "residents" before buying tags. Nor do we really disrespect your government or the laws it enacts.

However, we do feel that under the circumstances, we have a good healthy kick coming against the unfairness of the things set forth above. And, we are American and feel it our right to step up and say our little piece in a forward and open manner. If we cared to do so, your law enforcement officials are wont to do in arresting itinerant workers for not having Oregon tags, and fining them for a misdemeanor they have no way of knowing they are even committing; if we did that it would be to steal clear of this state, let crops spoil in field, orchard and vineyard, and move to boycott Oregon residents who seek work in other states. Hits Biological Survey
To the editor:
Among your readers there are undoubtedly many who would be glad to learn something of the cost and effectiveness of predatory animal control under U. S. Biological Survey management today.

We constantly note such articles as appeared in the Oregon Farmer, Aug. 20 issue, entitled "Trappers Again War on Predatory Animals," in which we are informed "livestock losses last year came to $116,000, and it was estimated that 75 per cent of all young birds and half of the fawns were destroyed." This refers to the past year in Klamath county, Oregon.

Oh, how terrible, too-boo. Just a sample of biological survey propaganda of the more harmless sort.

In Jackson county hundreds of country boys and homesteaders managed to keep off the relief rolls by trapping predatory animals. They collect $3 each for animals culled from the county. No such condition as the biological survey claims for Klamath county has resulted here! Isn't it strange that in Klamath county, where the biological survey has operated continuously since the "gay nineties" the predatory animals are destroying the whole county? Well, the biological survey is solely responsible for it all—they needly the bounty money—lobbied into the county and state treasuries with no one to oppose them. They now—sold a gold brick to be plain—and by their own statement Klamath is now in a bad fix.

If the biological survey sincerely wished to wreck their own castle all they need do is to exterminate the predatory animals. Will they do it? Certainly.

Not long ago the biological survey had one (1) inspector for both Oregon and Washington. Today Oregon alone has five biological survey inspectors, now rated junior biologists. That is where their federal funds are spent. As predatory animals disappear before civilization's advance, the good old biological survey enrolls more inspectors, puts on more federal joy-riding cars and a little more power to bureaucracy. Naturally there are a few details of this nature not publicly proclaimed.

In its predatory animal work the biological survey has always been carefully hidden from all outsiders one very important item, that is, total average cost per animal destroyed.

They have repeatedly published the cost per animal to state, county, game commission, sheepsman or stockmen. They never dare publish the combined or total cost per animal in federal, state, county, game commission, stock and sheepsman's funds. Try to get an honest answer to this from biological survey needs—and watch for the deep red color creeping up around the victim's ears.

GARDEN CLUB URGED TO SHARE BLOSSOMS

While the colorful blooms of late summer are bringing a riot of glory to local gardens Miss Jane Suedcoor, president of the Medford Garden club, wishes to remind gardeners this is a good time to let the world know about it. She asks Garden club members to remember this can best be done by taking out flowers to the Chamber of Commerce building and local hotels.

Anyone with the makings of a lovely bouquet is asked to take same to any one of these places. There can't be too many flowers to greet the tourist, for nothing makes a better impression upon the traveler.
