

ELUSIVE RUM ROW JOINS SPEAK EASY IN CAPITULATION

Many As Hundred Boats Formerly Stood Off New York Coast Waiting To Land Illicit Liquor Cargo.

By SIGHID ARNE.
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Two sails shot up the masts of a schooner in the azure-blue harbor of a little Mexican island. Wind belled her sails and she nosed north.
That afternoon coast guard headquarters in Washington was messaged that the "George and Earl" was headed toward American ports. And the "George and Earl" was on the coast guard's black list of rum-runners.

For days messages came in from coast guard cutters and planes that she had been sighted, still going north. Then she was lost.
Finally the New York coast guard was warned she was headed into that harbor. They searched the miles of New York wharves, and finally custom agents spotted her sliding up the East river. She was boarded and seized. She held 32,000 gallons of alcohol.
Coast guard intelligence here marked another boat off their list of suspects.
Gone With Speak-Easy.
At times during the prohibition era as many as a hundred such boats have been reported in a single day lying in "rum row" outside the 12-mile limit. But for several weeks now no such boat has been reported. Rum row seems to have gone the way of the speak-easy.
In 1924 rum row was in its heyday. From the Canadian border to the Virginia capes there idled schooners and small, engine-craft waiting for American speed boats to relieve them of their cargo of contraband liquor.

Rum running became so great along the coast that congress voted the coast guard more money for cutters. The new boats could move more swiftly than the rum schooners they were trailing, so there finally came a month in 1929 when the schooners had practically disappeared.
New Fleet Elusive.
But in their stead came a new hovering fleet that was more difficult to defeat. Bootleggers had bought low-lying, engine boats which were difficult to see and catch. Their numbers rose again until March, 1933, the month of the bank holiday, when the rum fleet dropped again. Perhaps, says the coast guard, there was less money for liquor.
Then came repeal. The fleet fell off farther. But then the proprietors thought of a new cargo. For the most part, the runners had carried Scotch whiskey during prohibition. Now they turned to 190 proof alcohol.
By August, 1934, the coast guard was again trailing and watching night and day. Secretary Morgenthau, of the treasury, under whose direction the coast guard works, decided to wipe out rum row. He called a conference of all his law enforcement units, and out of it worked a plan to co-ordinate coast guard, customs agents and the alcohol tax unit.

A small land-sea army of detectives was pitted against the alcohol runners. Coast guard trailed the boats off-shore and seized them when they could. Customs and alcohol tax men gathered evidence ashore, and patrolled the favorite dumping spots. The past few peaceful weeks seem to say that rum row at last admits defeat.

BAR ASSOCIATION COMMITTEE SPLIT ON F. R. POLICIES

Majority Members Claim New Deal Recognizes No Obligations to Protect Rights of Individuals

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Members of the American Bar association's special committee to study legislation affecting the rights of citizens split sharply today over their report on the policies of the Roosevelt administration.
In a report prepared for consideration by the association's annual convention as a whole, four majority members declared, "there is no indication that the (Roosevelt) administration recognizes any obligations whatever to the individual citizen in his constitutional rights."

The three minority members, however, recommended that the committee be discharged on the grounds that they believe further consideration served "no useful purpose in giving citizens any light on constitutional questions in addition to that already supplied by the opinions . . . of the supreme court."
The minority asserted that because this was a presidential election year, further consideration would "result in embroiling the American Bar association, whether willingly or not, in bitter partisan political discussion, and internal dissensions."
Said majority members of the committee:
"One who would preserve our constitutional system must deplore the action of President Roosevelt in recommending that members of congress set aside any doubts they might have about the validity of proposed legislation. Not even the court can compel congressmen and senators to develop a responsibility to recognize and protect the constitution."
