Editorial Correspondence

STONINGTON, Connecticut, August 29.—Your correspondent a week ago conceived the bright idea of taking a vacation. We felt a particular urge to get away from politics.

Among other things we motored over to the ancient whaling station of New Bedford, Massachusetts. While the older girls made the rounds of the second-hand stores we sought sanctuary in the famous Bourne museum, which is devoted largely to the whaling industry.

About the first thing we ran into was an oil portrait of "Commodore" Delano, and the information from our guide that the fine old gentleman was President Roosevelt's grandfather, a leading figure in the New Bedford shipping industry.

We finally shook the guide and wandered down stairs. The first room we entered contained a collection of ship models, very fine ones too,—one made of bone, of a French frigate valued at $30,000.

So we beat a strategic retreat to the first floor again and proceeded to the main exhibit room, famous for its reproduction of the elder Jonathan Bourne's whaling ship the "Lagoda" which nearly fills the main floor, and whose masts and spars rise nearly two stories to the roof.

We told him we were from Oregon and had known Jonathan Bourne, Jr., who was senator from Oregon, and at least the godfather of the once famous Oregon system, distinguished by the initiative, referendum and recall.

"So ye knew the senator, did ye?" queried the old boy. "W'all he was in here just a week back, to look things over. His sister built this model here. Calculate Jonathan, Jr., is in his eighties now, but he's purty spry, and as bright as they make 'em."

The old salt escorted us up in the balcony so we could get a birdseye view of the whaling ship below, and look over the office of the senator's father, the original Jonathan. The office was very interesting with the old mahogany desk, ink stands, ledgers and account books.

"He was a great man," said our guide, "and a hard worker. He owned a fleet of 15 whalin' ships and managed a score of others, and for half a century they made money. That Lagoda there was his best ship. Do ye know that there boat in 12 trips netted $680,000—yes sir,—that's big money, or used to be, but with this here New Deal what's a few hundred millions now?"

"No—no profit in it anymore. Oh there's whales out there, but the Norwegians get what they is, but they play mostly in Antarctic waters. The last local whalin' was ten years ago, and ye can see pictures of the whale on the first floor."

Yes sir, the old man Bourne was a hard worker, and a smart trader; a real Quaker-Yankee, with no foolishness about him. You can see the old stone Bourne wharf and warehouse down the street now, it's still runnin', but the city is goin' to take it over. He had a room up near the top with a cubby hole where he could work and also see what was goin' on below.

We made an after dinner call on some friends here in Stonington—nice people—for a pleasant, informal evening, a little cut in bridge, knitting and general conversation. Ten minutes after our arrival, some bright person hopped up to announce that Governor Landon was speaking at Buffalo, and she led a concerted dash for the family radio.

Escape from politics!—this stony beach, below our window, now being swept by a cold, rainy sou' easter, might as well try to escape from the tides, high and low,—it can't be done, mates, it can't be done. However we made the attempt—and that like the man biting the dog,—is news,—REAL news!

ALCATRAZ MISSES OUT IN PROCURING FEDERAL VOLUME ON SWIMMING

WASHINGTON (UP)—Inmates of Alcatraz prison might be surprised to learn that the federal government, which sent them there, came close to showing them how to escape.

Personal Health Service

By William Brady, M.D. Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene not to disease diagnosis or treatment will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

What makes the hit and run driver behave that way? Fear. But a driver of good character, good education or training, good judgment, can ordinarily restrain the impulse to run away and does so. However, there is that same person—a few little drinks of liquor and his or her good judgment is for a while in abeyance.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS. THIS headline tells a crisp and terse story: "Rebels Plan To Restore Spanish Monarchy."

A military dictatorship will be constituted indefinitely to exterminate all loyalist elements and to rule the country without any parliament whatever, high officials of the fascist junta asserted.

It is interesting to speculate upon that proposed plebiscite (which is a fancy diplomat's word for election). With a military dictatorship running the country, and no parliament whatever to bother it, and this military dictatorship set upon the idea of restoring the Spanish monarchy (meaning some member of ex-king Alfonso's family), just how many votes, do you reckon, would be counted AGAINST the restoration?

Both the Dr. and his weekly were openly hostile about Lemke until recently when the weekly came out with a more or less Lemke editorial.

Ye Poets Corner

The Moon (A poem for small children) By Elroy W. Anderson. The pretty moon hangs in the sky. Just like a great big light.

Just like a great big light. White tiny stars around it dance. Like candles shining bright.

Sometimes the moon is big and round, Just like a yellow cheese. And then sometimes it's cut in half; Then quartered, if you please.

And then a long thin crescent shape. Just like an archer's bow. And then sometimes no moon at all To light the earth below.
