He said in part:

"You will find the Scripture setting for my message tonight in the 25th chapter of Mathew, from the 31st to the 46th verses, inclusive. The world today is being convulsed with violence. I do not suppose there has ever been a time when world powers were so ill at ease and the danger signal so flagrantly thrust to view as now.

"People, in trying to feel from the cross are finding themselves thrust into the traffic jam on Hell's boulevard. Of the two Trinities, Grace, Mercy and Heaven or World-Pleasure, Drink and Hell, the latter prevails, ten to one.

"In 1935, in the United States alone, according to Edgar Hoover, director of federal bureau of investigation, there was a minimum of 12,000 murders and an estimated total of 1,445,581 major crimes. One out of 84 persons was subjected to injury or death through the iniquitous criminal regime. Aggravated robbery, theft, arson, rape, felonies, assault, or murder, annually is visited upon one of every 16 homes in America.

"What does all of this wholesale terrorism mean? The answer is: The citizenry of America has forgotten God. Greater chaos is in the offing unless there is a returning to God. 'The wicked shall be turned into Hell and all the nations that forget God.'"

CHOIR BOY ADMITS HAMMER SLAYING

CHICAGO, Sept. 1. — (AP) — Roland Munroe, 15-year-old choir boy, maintained an unruffled calm today as officials studied his confession to the hammer slaying of a crippled widow in a robbery that yielded $8 worth of jewelry.

Assistant State's Attorney Richard Devine said the red-haired prisoner confessed last night he beat Mrs. Agnes Roffels, 65, to death Saturday night at her home.

The prosecutor quoted the youth as observing without remorse:

"I don't think they'll convict me, though. I'm too young."

Devine said the boy apparently held the belief he had committed a "perfect crime," but after four hours of questioning declared:

"Well, I'll tell you. She died partly by accident and I killed her because I didn't want her to suffer."

PAYMENT SOUGHT FOR SUFFERINGS OF INNOCENT MAN

Will Ask North Carolina Legislature Compensate Gus Langley; Twice Made Ready to Die in Chair

ASHEBORO, N. C., Sept. 1.—(AP)—A petition was circulated here today asking the legislature to compensate Gus Langley, who twice escaped the electric chair by a matter of minutes, and then proved his innocence.

Langley, 33, a former house painter who now lives in Morristown, N. J., spent three years in prison.

Four years ago Langley was convicted in Asheville for the holdup killing of a filling station operator. Langley asserted he was en route from Wilmington to Asheville at the time.

Wins Reprieve.

A few minutes before he was to die in the electric chair, he won a reprieve. A new execution date was set. He got another eleventh-hour lease on life.

Pardon Commissioner Edwin Gill held an informal hearing and witnesses substantiated Langley's contention.

He was freed by executive clemency.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Sept. 1.—(AP)—Embittered by two narrow escapes from death in the electric chair for a crime he did not commit, Gus Langley stood in his cramped paint shop today and said he felt North Carolina should recompense him for his erroneous conviction and the time he spent in prison.

"I've never been the same mentally since," he complained.

"Seven times they got me ready to die," said Langley. "They shaved my head and prepared me for the chair. And seven times I was reprieved. Twice the reprieves came within 25 minutes of the time fixed for my death."

Family Separated.

Because of his conviction, he said, he and his wife, Mrs. Tressie Holtsclaw Langley of Wilmington, N. C., have separated. His two children, Juanita and Vernon, live with their mother. He hasn't seen them in two years, and he said he dare not visit them for fear of another harrowing experience with the law there.

Furthermore, he pointed out, he is still on parole.

That keeps him from getting much business at his specialty, interior decorating, because he said people don't like to have a paroled man working around their houses.
