

VISITOR RECALLS TRIALS OF PARTY LOST IN CAVERNS

OREGON CAVES.—(Sp.)—An experience of being lost in the Oregon Caves 56 years ago was recalled here this week by O. L. McPherson of Portland. His experiences occurred long before lights were installed or guided trips were provided through the caverns.

When 11 years old and living in Kerbyville, now known as Kerby, McPherson accompanied a party to the caverns. The group climbed for miles over ridges and down mountainsides without aid of trails to explore the caves. Equipped with candles, members of the party explored the caves as far back as the Ghost room without difficulty.

After several hours of exploration, looking into deep pits with invisible bottoms and marveling at the many formations, they started on their way out. In their wanderings, however, they lost their way. They stumbled, crawled and groped through narrow passageways for hours, meeting with no success.

Finally one of the party accidentally found an old rotten string leading into the darkness. Frantically the amateur explorers followed the string and found themselves going down to a level they had not seen before. After tedious periods of crawling and sliding in extremely small passageways, they emerged at an opening now used for an entrance.

McPherson believes the string had been used by some earlier visitors and possibly by a party which had been led several years before by Elijah Davidson, discoverer of the caves in 1874.

In the half-century that has elapsed, visits in the underground realm of weird beauty have been made more enjoyable by the cutting of comfortable passageways, removal of obstructions, installation of ladders, and illumination, construction of a new exit tunnel and completion of numerous other improvements.

PICK MARKET HERE FOR CEREAL TOAST

Medford has been selected as a test market for the introduction of "Huskies," a new ready-to-eat whole wheat cereal, according to James Ambler, Portland, General Foods sales manager for this territory.

Huskies will be introduced in an extensive advertising campaign in leading newspapers in the chosen markets. First of this series of ads, which feature nationally famous and locally prominent sports stars such as Frankie Frisch, Matty Bell, Helene Madison and Buster Crabbe, appears today in the Mail Tribune.

"General Foods feels," says Ambler, "that the time is ripe for the aggressive promotion of worth-while new products. We are confident that actual market tests of Huskies in Medford will confirm the favorable results obtained in our laboratories and in preliminary tests among hundreds of housewives." Huskies is the most recent addition to the 39-year-old Post cereal line comprising Grape Nuts, Post Toasties, Post's 40 per cent Bran Flakes, Post's Whole Bran and Grape Nuts Flakes.

Old Timer

(For the Runners, by the Banker)

One time in my boyhood
I cared not to play,
But came an Old Timer,
Delightful and gay.

Who said to me kindly,
O play while you may,
Enjoying all seasons,
Or blooming or gray.

I told the Old Timer,
Endearing my day,
Like him I'd be cheery
As he told the way.

Said he, eyes a-twinkle,
I tell all I can,
Contriving and trying
To build a full man.

Imagining the gloomy,
The moody, the sad,
In dear, happy sunlight
Of dreams that are glad.

He smiled with love's largesse
Though wrinkled and old,
And still I am warmer
Through tale that he told.

Yet learning how loving
Enlivened his heart,
Transfigured his features
As love played a part.

While now as I follow
Where Old Timer led,
I smile at the shadows
That fall on my head.

I free from depression,
Filled up by despair,
To roam where the vision
Are pleasing and fair.

Again in the purple
Of life's mental power,
Again in the glory
Of love's healing hour.

Again in a region
Where giving is gain,
In light of the valley,
The peak and the plain.

So when you have trouble,
Forget it awhile;
In flight of your fancy,
Forget it and smile.
