$200 DONATED TO RED CROSS FUND FOR FIRE RELIEF

Generously responding to the Red Cross plea made yesterday for relief funds to aid homeless and hungry residents of fire devastated coast towns, Medford people had donated approximately $200 by this afternoon. This figure did not include contributions from Ashland and Eagle Point, which have not been reported as yet.

George Frey, chairman of the Jackson county Red Cross chapter, stated that the whole-hearted response was highly encouraging, but that it was hoped the county quota of $450 could be raised by tomorrow or the next day, so that this county may be the first to report success.

Clothes, Frey said, are not needed as they are being furnished by federal relief agencies. Articles of clothing which have been constructed by women WPA sewing classes and held over in Portland for just such an emergency, are being distributed rapidly, he pointed out, and are ample in number and kind for all needs.

Money donations may be left at any Medford or Ashland bank or the bank at Eagle Point or paid directly to the local Red Cross office in the courthouse. Contributors are reminded to leave their names and addresses so that receipts may be sent them.

On Rialto Bill

Stuart Erwin, Florence Rice and Paul Kelly share starring honors in "Women Are Trouble," which heads the double bill showing at the Rialto theater for tomorrow and Thursday. The story goes thus:

City Editor Blaine and his top reporter, Casey, were good friends until Ruth Lolan went to work on The Star. Then trouble began. For one thing, war between the police and a gang of post-prohibition racketeers broke wide open, with The Star leading the cleanup fight.

When Ruth scooped Casey by pulling headline news from the very center of the enemy camp, the war entered their own front yard, with both Ruth and Blaine finally getting kidnaped and sentenced by the gang's own court to death.

"I Stand Condemned" is the other feature playing on the same bill with "Women Are Trouble." Harry Baur, freat dramatic star, is starred in the title role.
