

McLarnin Whips Canzoneri--Eager For Shot at Champion Ross

IRISH LAD SHOWS OLD-TIME FORM IN SLASHING BOUT

Judges Unanimous — Ringsiders Say Jimmy Looked Best in Two Years—Garden Angles for Title Go

By ALAN GOULD

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Jimmy McLarnin, the clouting Celt who was ready to hang up his gloves and quit the ring little more than a year ago, found himself very much in the fight picture again today after giving a blackbacking to pug-nosed little Tony Canzoneri, former lightweight king.

McLarnin turned the tables on Canzoneri last night at Madison Square Garden before a crowd of 11,423 cash customers who took time out from the world series arguments to see the two former title-holders go 10 slashing rounds. Last May Tony gave Jimmy a 10-round licking.

Unanimous Verdict. McLarnin carried off the unanimous decision after left-handing Canzoneri into bloody submission. Tony survived a three-second knockdown in the second round, when he was flattened by a straight right to the chin. He finished gamely despite gashes around both eyes, his nose and mouth. McLarnin outpointed his rival in every round except the first and tenth, which Tony won, and the fourth, which was even.

Ringside critics were unanimous in rating McLarnin's performance his best here in at least two years, despite the fact his victim lacked anything like the speedy aggressiveness of his best days.

Want Title Shot. McLarnin and his long-time manager, Pop Foster, talked eagerly of the chance to regain the welterweight title from Barney Ross of Chicago. The Garden's energetic promoter, Jimmy Johnston, lost no time starting negotiations for a fourth McLarnin-Ross fight to be held this winter. They waged three outdoor battles for the welterweight crown, splitting two decisions in 1934 and fighting the rubber match in 1935, with Ross the victor.

Canzoneri couldn't get away from my left," explained McLarnin. "My timing was better than it has been in a long time. The fight I lost to Tony last spring helped put me back in shape. My legs had all the speed I needed."

McLarnin had an eight-pound pull in the weights, scaling 145 to Canzoneri's 137.

CRIPPLED TIGERS POINT FOR INDIANS

The mail-carrying department, crippled by the loss of Ray Lewis from his halfback post, and the line weakened by the loss of Orford, first string tackle, the Medford high school Tigers last night started hard drill in preparation for the impending clash with the Roseburg Indians on the new turf field here Saturday.

Lewis, his ankle badly swollen from a severe strain received in the Eureka game Saturday, is going to classes on crutches, and Orford, his nose splattered when he dived into the ground in the same game, is being held out of practice. Neither man will play for several weeks, Coach Bill Howman believes.

The Roseburg team is believed much stronger than the one that bowed to a clawing Tiger, 25-0, last year. In the 1935 season the Indians lost to Eugene high school by a 60-0 score, but this year held the vaunted University City eleven to 18 points. In their starting game this year, Roseburg downed a strong Albany team by a good margin, and the entire squad has been pointing for the Medford game.

SPORT BREEZE

by EDDIE BRIETZ
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Burling Grimes, the old pitcher, is the betting favorite to land Casey Stengel's job in Brooklyn. Burling's Louisville club finished seventh in the American Association this year, so he should feel right at home in Flatbush. It is also more than a possibility that Larry MacPhail, late of the Reds, will step into John Gorman's shoes as general manager of the daffiness boys.

Some days ago, when it was rumored MacPhail had his eyes on the St. Louis Browns, this corner wondered how he and Rogers Hornsby would hit it off. Well, it turns out the pair have a healthy respect for each other. MacPhail often calls Hornsby to ask his opinion of certain players. When Rogers answers the phone he always says, "Hello, MacPhallure."

There were a lot of laughs in the firing of Stengel. Casey, who is expected to be the world's star for a newspaper syndicate, arrived at the park yesterday, found a stranger in his seat and demanded: "Have I been fired here, too?" When Max Carey, another dodger ex, heard that Stengel had been given the old heave-ho, he quipped: "Well, all they need over there is a good manager." Then Max, who he had experienced that way, offered to assist Casey in collecting his 1937 salary.

What do the baseball money players do when the chips are up? Di Maggio and Gehrig fanned yesterday when a hit might have meant the ball game. In the same inning, Hal Schumacher pitched himself out of the all-time, All-American hole. With one run in, the bases loaded and none out, he whiffed Di Maggio and Gehrig and forced Bill Dickey to fly out.

Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins left the series flat to fly to Wyoming for a big game hunting expedition with Mickey Cochrane and Tris Speaker. Lou Gehrig has been playing this series all doped up with aspirin to ease lumbago pains in his back. Fears of the Dodger directors must be hatched out from the blasts they are getting for firing Stengel.

BELCASTRO WINS MAIN GO AFTER HECTIC EVENING

Just a few of the things that happened at that jaw-gapingly amazing series of wrestling matches at the Army last night: Pete Belcastro and Gene Moore, both drop-kick artists, both lost the main event after dividing the first two falls, and for the first time in local history two drop-kickers kicked simultaneously, knocking both of them flat. When they recovered Moore threw the Italian out of the ring and the two stood toe to toe and slugged through the ropes. Belcastro standing on the apron, while Referee Swede Anderson tried to break them.

Belcastro, unable to get a good swipe at Moore, wound up and whacked Anderson on the back of the head, sending him slumping to the floor, out colder than a dead fish. The recoil knocked Belcastro backwards onto the floor where a spectator decided that would be a good time to kick him. The lethal Latin leaped to his feet, cracked the spectator resoundingly on the mouth, kicked him once for good luck, and retired back into the ring. There, with Moore still sadly pondering the prostrate form of the fallen arbiter, Belcastro sneaked up behind his enemy and knocked him cold, diving on top for a body press.

Anderson eventually emerged from the ether, looked around in befuddlement, found Belcastro on top of Moore, and patted the Italian's back in token of victory. When he realized what he had done Anderson wanted to drag the winner out behind the Army gate to "have it out," but the great champion was not available—he was being hustled to his dressing room under a police escort!

In the middle event Les Wolfe continued to flaunt his new found skulduggery against Joe Hubka, and won on a fluke after the Nebraska apparently had the match in the bag. Wolfe took the first fall in the second round, after Hubka boomed and caught the winner out behind the Army gate. In the third round Hubka backed the Texas into a corner and looped Wolfe's feet over the top ropes in a spread eagle, from where he rained in elbow slams. Wolfe slugged his way out of that.

In the next round Wolfe again insisted on kicking low and Anderson attempted to break it up. Wolfe hit him in the groin from the ring, from where Hubka leaped and pulled him inside with a flying head scissor, taking the fall with an airplane scissor and a body press.

In the fourth round Hubka swarmed onto Wolfe so as not to let him recover from the beating he had just taken, and the Texas did as convincing a monkey act as could be seen at the Bronx zoo. When Hubka was holding his feet for an attempted Boston crab, Wolfe ran around the bottom rope with his hands, for all the world like a spider monkey running along a vine. Hubka finally pried him loose from the ropes and jumped on his back for a figure-4 scissor of his own, steering Wolfe around the ring like a horse by blind-folding him and pulling his head to one side or the other. Wolfe finally dived over the ropes while groping about, the weight of both men landed on Hubka's back, and the Nebraska was all through, except for absorbing a few more of Wolfe's low punches.

For the second time in as many weeks Wolfe's penchant for oratory got the best of him and he climbed into the ring to make a public address. For the second time in as many rounds with a figure-4 scissor called him so justly that he could not be heard above the din. Finally, in anger, he jerked the public address microphone from the hands of Promoter Mack Lillard, but an instructor in the sounds of disapproval made it impossible to be heard and he slammed the mike to the mat, shattering it. The boxing commission put the chill on him for a new mike, at a cost of $3 of his purse.

In the opener Billy Burns, Atlanta, Georgia, rasal, repeated an earlier victory over Prince Mihalakis by virtue of Man Mountain Dean's pet hold—a "treacher seat" dive to the Arabian's mid-riff. There was no fall in the opening round, when Burns clomped down on Mihalakis' foot with great vigor, but in the next section the Arab took the fall with a dragon scissor after Burns had hit, bit and kicked him.

At the start of the next fall Mihalakis came out of his corner with a drop kick, and a second one also found its mark. But when he attempted the third one Burns rolled out of the way and the Arab landed flat on his back. While he was reclining there attempting to get his breath Burns
