WRESTLERS HATE BATTLE ROYAL AS ENEMIES GANG UP

Fans know that a battle royal is about the most exciting form of wrestling combat, so fast that no human eye can follow all the contortions of the battlers, but what do the wrestlers themselves think of it? With a six-man free-for-all on deck for next Monday night at the Armory, the question has significance.

No wrestler, apparently, enjoys the mix ups just for the fun of it. They're too blamed uncertain.

Fritz Belcastro doesn't like them because he invariably has to thrash three or four men to keep from being mobbed, the result of his unorthodox attack in single battle, where the only two he has to worry about are the other wrestler and the referee. "They can't take me alone so they gang up on me when they have one of those lousy battle royals. The first couple I was in I got a pretty good beating, but I've learned plenty since then," Belcastro said when advised he was to be one of the infantry in the coming skirmish.

Les Wolfe has usually looked on the dog fights with a tolerant eye because, having been a clean wrestler, he didn't have to worry about being ganged but only helped gang the others. Since he's deserted the simon pure for the besting browed angle of the game, the equine has taken on another pigment and Wolfe's distaste for battle royals may soon be as cordial as Belcastro's.

Billy Burns says he has no difference to him whether he wrestles in a battle royal or in man-to-man warfare, so long as the referee minds his own business and keeps out of the way. Joe Hubka doesn't like them until after they start, but in the excitement he usually enjoys himself more than ordinarily he said.

"They're a little like football, with a lot of men piling up, and football is my favorite game," the former Nebraska halfback declared.

Jimmy Goodrich and Gene Moore were not in on the poll so their reactions are not yet known.

he buys, to establish a balance of trade. Then there is the enigmatic future of Japan.

In months and perhaps years, if there is no war, and things work out perfectly for all concerned, world stabilization may be effected. However, there is no need for anyone to stay up nights waiting for it.

Meanwhile, the statements which Mr. Morgenthau has been issuing about it, should be charged up to the campaign fund and reported to the clerk of the house, under the political expenditures law.

The A. F. of L. has come out for labor peace. Mr. Dubinsky is for peace. Mr. Zaritsky is for peace. And, finally, Mr. John L. Lewis has reluctantly admitted he has been for peace all the time. Therefore, it may appear that, as everyone is for peace, there will be peace. But there won't be.

The opposing labor factions are for peace in the same way as international statesmen. They want it at their own price. Underneath, neither side is in a compromising mood. Certain motions have to be made for effect, merely because they can not be openly opposed.

The supposition is general among those who know the inside of current negotiations that the peace moves will be lost in an accumulation of committees and sub-committees. Nothing can keep the trouble out of the A. F. of L. convention next month, they say. Nothing will ever induce Green to let the C. I. O. crowd sit in on the convention, where they might be able to out him as president of the A. F. of L.

When such fundamental questions of purpose, life and jobs are at stake, there is generally no way out but war.

YOUTHS DENY MAKING BALL MACHINES PAY BY STEEL TAPE USE

J. W. Worner and Wade Wilson Wells, two well dressed, hitch-hiking youths from Fort Worth, Tex., charged with petty larceny in defrauding a skill ball machine in Valentine's cafe out of $5, appeared in justice court yesterday afternoon.

They denied they defrauded the skill ball machine but said they had $2 less after playing it.

It was further alleged the youths had caused the machine to remit, by the use of a piece of steel tape. Justice of the Peace William R. Coleman took the case under advisement and said this morning more evidence would have to be introduced to convince him the skill machine had been bilked with a piece of steel tape.

The youths admitted they had won in two establishments playing the contraptions before they went to Valentine's cafe, and stuck nickels in the machines there. They lost, they say. After drinking some tomato juice they started south on the Pacific highway in the general direction of Texas.

The pair took a straightforward story and by way of proof of their honesty, caused skill ball machines to disgorge copiously, with the proprietor and the police watching. One of the youths with 50c worth of nickels, hit the $1.50 twice and missed once by a hair.

Communications

A Horse of Another Color.

To the Editor:

The officer of the remount headquarters for the zone has sent me a memorandum on the registering of hot-bred horses which I thought might be of community interest should you care to publish one or two items from it.

As you probably know, the government has for some time encouraged the breeding of better saddle horses by purchasing thoroughbred stallions of the proper type and of the finest blood lines, and lending these to communities interested in improving their native stock. This movement has proved so popular that not enough stallions have been available to meet all the requests, and the remount association has, in the interests of good breeding, placed the stallions in the localities having the better bred mares. Most registered animals are purebred stock, but recently as an offshoot of the Jockey club there was established a half-bred stud book for the registration of foals whose sires are registered thoroughbreds. Last year the remount association took over the half-bred stud book, and henceforth in the placing of its stallions it will consider the number of registered half-breds or better that a community has registered. As a special inducement it is at this time registering at the following rates:

Foals	$ 2.00
Yearlings	4.00
Older	10.00

All fillies and mares six years or under may also be registered at the fee rate of two dollars up to December 15, 1936.

There could be no better place than the Rogue River valley to raise horses, but until recently breeders have not given much thought to the quality of what they were producing. Half-breds and three-quarter-breds make the best of cow ponies, saddle horses, hunters and polo ponies, but certain families of the thoroughbred are better suited for one use than another, hence if the colts are registered the prospective buyer can look up his pedigree and find proof that he is purchasing the animal most likely to do the work he intends him to. There are privately owned thoroughbred stallions here and in Grants Pass, and a number of half-bred colts have been raised, but few have been registered. Application blanks can be had from the remount purchasing and breeding headquarters at Fort Douglas, Utah. I believe if more breeders knew about this opportunity they would avail themselves of it.

Wild Geese Flee Death At Niagara

Navy Grid Hopes Go Up And Down

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 15.—(AP)—Navy's hopes for beating Yale—her first major opponent this year—stung up and down today.

Hopes rose with the announcement that Irwin Pike, regular end of last year, would be able to start Saturday in Baltimore. Pike had been out with pre-season injuries.

Hopes fell with the announcement that Frank Case, Jr., field general and first string blocking back, was in the hospital and might not get into the game at all.

TIGERS WILL USE 2-TEAM SYSTEM

The two-team system which Coach Bill Bowerman of the Medford high school used against Roseburg with more than ordinary success will be repeated against Marshfield Saturday, and probably in all subsequent encounters, the coach has decided.

The first team will take the field against the Homecrubbers for the first quarter, and the second team will take over until the half. If a substantial score margin is held at the half, it is probable that the shock troops will carry on for the second half.

A traveling squad of 33 men, two managers, Coach Bowerman and Kirtley, and Ray Lewis, injured right halfback, will leave Medford by bus Friday morning. The 33 men will provide tackles and ends three deep, with extra guards and backfield men if needed.

Drill for the Marshfield fray will taper off tonight with a light workout. Many students and a few coaches are planning on making this trip to the coast to see the game.

PASSING ATTACK AIM OF CALLISON

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 15.—(AP)—Oregon strove today to avoid a permanent reputation as the "passless wonders" of the Pacific coast conference.

Just to prove that the Webfoos can throw 'em and receive 'em, Coach "Frank" Callison promised there would be a successful and a few coaches against Idaho at Portland Saturday even if he "had to go out and catch them" himself.

The Webfoos have thrown 17 passes in three games but not one has been completed.

Tom Blackman, sophomore fullback, received a knee injury in practice and Callison said Jean LeCau probably would start.
