

SIMPSON DIVORCE TOPIC OF MOMENT IN ELITE CIRCLES

London Wonders If Fair American Will Attend King's House Party Next Week At Sandringham.

Offered Film Role
HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Ernest (Wally) Simpson, American-born friend of King Edward VIII of England, has been offered a Hollywood motion picture contract, Jack Sherill, actors agent, announced today.

Sherill said he cabled Mrs. Simpson at her new residence, 16 Cumberland Terrace, in London, where she took up residence after deciding to divorce her English business-man husband.

Universal studio, Sherill said, is "keenly interested" in her as an acting prospect and a contract is already prepared, awaiting the brunette beauty's acceptance.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—London's fashionable set, discussing in Mayfair drawing rooms the divorce action brought by Mrs. Ernest (Wally) Simpson against her husband, asked this question today:

"Will 'Wally' attend King Edward's house party at Sandringham next week?"

Mayfair conversations centered around prospects the American-born friend of the monarch, who charged her broker husband with misconduct in a provincial divorce suit, may cancel her plan to join a small group of the ruler's friends at the royal country residence.

The house party was planned to coincide with King Edward's first visit to Sandringham since his father, King George, died there last January.

Secure As Friend

Authoritative sources said tonight Mrs. Simpson's position in British court circles will remain secure as long as she retains the favor of her strong-willed admirer, King Edward VIII.

As King Edward's guest, she will continue to dine off the royal dinner plate alongside leaders in the empire's social life.

It is entirely possible, informed observers said, that some of her fellow guests will have strong feelings in the matter. But those who know the monarch's temperament hold grave doubts that any recipient of a royal invitation would send regrets or plead illness, unless her or she were prepared to produce a doctor's certificate.

A royal invitation amounts to a command.

Attorneys for Mrs. Simpson, the former Wallis Warfield of Baltimore, were working to complete legal documents for the hearing to be held at Ipswich during the sittings beginning October 24.

No Defense Planned

Simpson has announced the petition filed by his wife—on charges of misconduct, the only ground for divorce under British law—would not be defended.

Time may tell whether the king's affection is mere friendship or a royal romance. Before and since his accession to the throne Edward often has had the frolicsome Mrs. Simpson in his pleasure parties.

King Edward, legally, may marry whom he chooses—but it might cost him his throne.

There is only one legal limitation placed upon an English king in the choice of his throne. Under the act of settlement of 1701 he may neither adopt the Roman Catholic faith nor marry a Catholic. It is understood Mrs. Simpson is a Protestant.

Tradition Only Bar

The king does not have to obtain permission from any quarter to marry. There is no restriction which says that he must marry royalty or nobility; if he wishes he may pick a commoner. The last king to marry a commoner was Henry VIII.

While there is nothing in law to prevent King Edward and Mrs. Simpson getting married, there is plenty of modern royal tradition which would oppose it. Women who have figured in divorce suits have been on the black-list of King Edward's predecessors for a long time.

His austere mother, Queen Mary, has been so opposed to divorces that she barred them from all court functions during her long reign with King George.

English people say that King Edward would arouse plenty of antagonism among his people if he tried to marry Mrs. Simpson.

They go further and declare that such a marriage might have a serious effect on the position of the throne. They are equally emphatic in saying there is no likelihood that the king would venture such a step, knowing the possible consequences.

What would happen if King Edward should insist on marrying someone to whom the country was opposed? Nobody knows, because there is no precedent.

ELKS INITIATE 8 AND ENJOY FEED

Eight men were received under the spreading awnings of the Medford Elks' lodge last night in one of the best initiation programs of the year. Elks from Portland, Klamath Falls and Ashland were present. Entertainment was furnished by the Klamath group.

Frank Hohlweg, Oliver Leedy, Victor L. Marshall, George C. Witter, Clayborne W. Konkel, Charles A. Whitlock, Jr., Charles G. Smith and Clyde L. Smith were the initiators.

The Klamath group, aside from bringing their 30 orchestra, presented a magician who mystified the Elks with various tricks. Colored motion pictures of the recent Elks' convention at Los Angeles were also shown.

After the lodge session the brothers retired to the basement where an excellent dinner, prepared under the direction of P. G. Bigham and George Howard, was served.

Next big social function of the lodge will be the Halloween dance at the temple, to be open to Elks and their invited guests, for which plans are already under way.

Hunt Accident Fatal
McMINNVILLE, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Walter H. Rucker, 32, guard at the Kelly Butte jail, Portland, died today from injuries suffered in a hunting accident Thursday.
