

TOY EXHIBIT WILL BE SEEN AT HOME LIVING ASSEMBLY

One of the special features of the Family Living Conference to be held in Medford at the court house auditorium October 20 is a new educational homemade toy exhibit. Fathers, mothers, grandparents, aunts, uncles, and older brothers and sisters will be interested in these colorful, simple, durable and easily made toys for children of pre-school age—1 to 6 years. Come and get ideas for Christmas presents, birthday presents, or gifts to sell. Those who come to the meeting may sign for a free pamphlet of directions for making homemade toys, which will be issued by the Oregon State college home economics extension service the latter part of October.

Other features of the family living conference will include an exhibit of free and inexpensive pamphlets dealing with many problems of family relationship and child development. Mrs. Maud Morse, extension specialist in parent education, will speak on the subject "How Has Time Changed Family Relationships?" This topic will bring to your mind many questions. Bring your questions to the meeting, where you may discuss them in the group, or you may put them in the "question box," which Mrs. Morse will open for impersonal discussion during the afternoon session. The "question box" is included this year by request because many who attend meetings have questions which they would like to have discussed, but are hesitant about asking them in front of the group.

All homemakers of Jackson county are invited to attend this conference. Morning session begins at 10 a. m. and the afternoon session will close at 3:30. Those attending are asked to bring an individual lunch box. Coffee will be served by the committee in charge. A nursery school will be provided for pre-school age children where they may play under supervision while their mothers attend the meeting. Arrangements for the meeting are being made by Mabel C. Mack, home demonstration agent for Jackson county.

COUNTY BUDGET BOARD HOLDS FIRST MEETING TO SURVEY REQUESTS

First formal session of the Jackson county budget committee is under way today with George Edward Dunn of Ashland as chairman and George T. Frey of Medford as secretary. George Weeks of McLeod, orchardist, and the county court comprise remainder of the budget committee.

Two matters of interest are scheduled to come before the budget committee. A $5000 appropriation for weed control, and the application of county offices for more clerical help the coming year.

County Granges, farmers and stockmen are expected to make the request for weed control. It has not yet been formally presented. However, the budget committee has investigated the proposition.

The application for increased clerical help is based upon the business increase the past two years and is held necessary for speedier handling of county work. The clerical help was reduced heavily as an economy move early in the depression.

A member of the budget committee forecast that if any increase in clerical help was granted it would be uniform in all offices.

Today's session of the budget committee will be devoted to tentative consideration of all items presented, to enable the budget committee to familiarize themselves with the budget.

Another session is scheduled for early next week.

Frank C. Clark has been engaged as architect, according to Frank G. Farrell, attorney for the district. The building will contain four rooms and all modern facilities, and will be located a short distance off the Crater Lake highway on a former portion of the Ace Weeks property.

E. N. Tray is chairman of the school board, H. A. Ditsworth and Blanche Zimmerman being the other members. Peter W. Sandoz is the clerk.

be asked to undertake immediate legislative consideration of a $200,000 hospital for Multnomah county, the Oregon Tuberculosis association said. The hospital was authorized by the voters at the last general election but legislative action is necessary before funds can be made available.
