Senator James Couzens

SENATOR COUZENS who died yesterday was a unique figure in American public life. He was immensely rich, many times a millionaire, but fought all his life against the unjust privileges that wealth often brings.

He was born in Canada, a British subject, but no man was more passionately devoted to the highest ideals of genuine Americanism. He was a self-made man, a rugged individualist in training and temperament, but had the vision to see the world war and the passing of the American frontier, created an entirely new social and economic problem, and was one of the first prominent Republicans, not only to give President Roosevelt and the New Deal his support, but after the acute stage of the crisis had passed to disregard partisan lines, and continue that support.

In one way he showed his English inheritance and training, by following the long established tradition of the English gentleman. Independently wealthy in early middle life, (thanks to his association with Henry Ford) he abandoned the idea of making more money, or living a life of luxurious ease, and devoted himself to public service,—first as a progressive mayor of his city of Detroit, later as representative of the state of Michigan in the United States senate. In the senate his record was one of extraordinary courage and independence, and he furnished one of the few examples in American public life, of a man of great wealth—and sudden wealth,—who devoted his energies and efforts almost exclusively to legislation that would help the average man, and bring about a fairer distribution of wealth.

In other words, the public interest, not self interest, was always his guiding motive; the welfare of his country was his constant goal, even though to reach that goal, he as one of the beneficiaries of the old deal, would have to pay for it.

A HIGH type of citizen and a rare one! But as we look into the future there will be more of the "Jim" Couzens type, as time goes on. At any rate we hope so. For that will be the salvation of the country as we see it.

More and more American men we believe, will see something better in life than the constant pursuit of the almighty dollar, the piling up of cash and more cash in the bank until their days are done. Security yes,—but after that has been attained,—then a truce to money grubbing and a life of service to one's country and one's fellow men!

That, as we understand it, is essentially the British tradition. We have taken so many things from England, our language, our common law, our bill of rights, we see no reason why as we mature as a nation, we should not take this one,—perhaps the most valuable of them all.

What It's All About

HOWEVER this election comes out, it will go down in history as one of the strangest on record. In the memory of the present generation certainly there has been nothing like it. Perhaps in the intensity of feeling, the Bryan campaign 40 years ago, most nearly approaches it, but while many gold Democrats left their party at that time, there was nothing approaching the bi-partisan confusion worse confounded, that exists at the present time.

For conservative Democrats are not only flocking to the Republican standard, yelling their heads off with William Randolph Hearst and the Liberty League, but other Democrats, like James Warburg, and conservative Democratic newspapers like the New York Times, who have little or no use for the New Deal, declare they can't swallow Landon and the G. O. P. and maintain the welfare of this country demands the re-election of President Roosevelt. The Republicans are not split up as badly, but the Literary Digest poll, shows over ten percent of the Republicans who voted for Hoover four years ago are for Roosevelt today, which means about 2,000,000 Hoover Republicans, are today for Roosevelt.

WHAT does it all mean? Has the nation, politically speaking, gone crazy?

No, it's all natural and logical enough. All this confusion, this strain and stress, might be termed the birth pangs of two new national parties. Probably something very like it occurred when the Whig party disappeared, and the Republican party was born, just before the Civil war.

President Roosevelt has created a new party, which is nominally Democratic, but is actually a new Liberal party. (Or it might be more accurate to say, that he has been the medium, through which elemental natural forces, have created a new line of political cleavage, not only in this country, but throughout the world.)

Inevitably Liberals in both parties have gone to Roosevelt, and just as inevitably true Conservatives in both parties, have joined against him. Because Landon represents the only effective protest against this type of Liberalism, they are now supporting the Republican candidate and—save the mark—the Republican platform!

THAT'S all there is to it, in a couple of Andy's nutshell. Of course it is confusing, but it is also interesting, for before our eyes, ladies and gentlemen, political history is being made.

When the tumult and the shouting dies,—when the noise and fury is no more,—there will be two main parties in this country, the liberal and conservative, regardless of what names and labels they may bear.

Which incidentally will be all to the good, for two opposing parties should represent two definite and opposing sets of principles and beliefs,—something that has not been true for two or three decades, but will be true, after the third of this November!

Personal Health Service

By William Brady, M.D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. DUCTLESS GLANDS AND ARTHRITIS

Dr. William Brady, 265 El Camino, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Every school child and adult not under medical care should have a suitable iodine ration, in my opinion. This is particularly important where chronic arthritis exists, for the oxidation process is a metabolism is nearly always slow in arthritis.

Many physicians prescribe small doses of thyroid hormone for the poor metabolism in chronic arthritis. Small doses over a long period of time seem to be more beneficial than larger doses for a short course.

As already pointed out, it has been found that diathermy in carefully controlled doses exerts a corrective influence upon the thyroid function in cases of hypothyroidism, and the judicious application of diathermy to the gland is a valuable aid in the treatment of chronic arthritis. (Diathermy to the pancreas prolongs the effect of insulin; and probably has a similar effect on the internal secretions of other ductless glands. Patients should be warned of unqualified healers who attempt to give such treatment, for a little too much may do great harm by producing acute hyperthyroidism.)

In certain cases chronic arthritis is complicated by pituitary gland dysfunction or by ovarian dysfunction, and the endocrine disturbance must be properly treated before any amelioration in the arthritis can be expected.

Hypodermic injections of parathyroid extract daily have been compared in effect with daily injections of insulin in diabetes. The effects of a dose appear in from twenty to thirty minutes, greater flexibility of affected joints, increased facility of movement and feeling of well being, and lasts for about twelve hours.

The increased activity of the patient under the effects of a dose of parathyroid extract in itself is beneficial, stimulating general metabolism and improving circulation and the nutrition of the affected tissues. This treatment is most valuable in long standing cases in which patients are confined to bed or wheel chair and almost helpless. The cumulative effects of parathyroid treatment are continued use of the joints made more flexible, permanent relief of stiffness, greater ease of movement.

Parathyroid injections may be used along with any other treatment and in medical hands are perfectly safe. If I had chronic disabling arthritis I'd want treatment along these lines: 1. Sunbaths or ultraviolet lamp treatment. 2. Iodine or very small doses of thyroid. 3. From 200-500 to 500,000 units of vitamin D daily. 4. A diet including plenty of calcium (that is, milk, cheese, eggs, peas, beans, greens, carrots, turnips, peanuts and nuts). 5. A daily shot of parathyroid hormone. 6. Three ounces of wheat germ (about 1000 units of vitamin B) daily, and perhaps a dash of dried yeast with it. 7. Diathermy. 8. A comfortably dry climate. 9. Plain wheat in place of refined flour in every dish. 10. A palm tree, a fig, a pinto, a pipe and a paper in which I might teach people how to keep well.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Waterless Cooking
Would you recommend waterless utensils in my kitchen in order to preserve the minerals and vitamins of vegetables and meats? . . . (H. L. M.)

Answer.—Such cooking probably saves some of the minerals and vitamins lost by ordinary cooking but not enough to matter much. In many cases waterless cooking certainly saves the flavor or savor of meats and vegetables.

A and B
You said grade B milk is fit for consumption only when thoroughly cooked. If grade A milk, having 2000 colonies of bacteria per cc. is fit for consumption raw, why should not grade B milk, having only a few more (8000) colonies per cc. be just as safe and wholesome? It has the same fat content. . . . (W. W. E.)

Answer.—That's why the one is called grade A and the other grade B. I believe all authorities agree that grade B milk should be used only when cooked.

Arthritis
Please repeat briefly the particulars of the treatment of chronic arthritis with massive doses of vitamin D. . . . (Mrs. C. C.)

Answer.—Send stamped addressed envelope for monograph on arthritis. Enclose ten cents coin if you want booklet, "The Ills Called Rheumatism." (Copyright, 1936, John F. Dille Co.)

News Behind The News

Connecticut for the president. His friends thought he was doing all right from here.

The important revelations of the committee, which has never held a public hearing, now are two. It disclosed that the Du Ponts gave money to the republican cause in Maine and that President Roosevelt spent $510 on himself.

Republicans, democrats, liberty leaguers and every political organization are filing reports with the clerk of the House, listing their campaign contributors—that is, everyone except the communists.

The latest report of the communist campaign committee shows receipts of $13,486 between September 1 and 15, but does not contain the name of a single contributor. All donations are disguised as contributions from other organizations, such as the communist party, the workers' organizations, etc.

The communists apparently want only the names of the capitalists made public.

The health of supreme court justices is of such primary political importance that a certain tension has developed within the new marble building which houses the nine justices. It was relieved the other day when Justice Stone became the first justice to fall ill this session with a minor ailment.

He is not only the second youngest justice, but the healthiest.

THE MAIL TRIBUNE'S Political Safety-Valve

This newspaper will publish communications, limited to 400 words, expressing the political views of our readers. Regardless of party affiliations, all interested are invited to contribute to this pre-election department.

Another County Heard From.
To the Editor:
Since you have opened your columns to political discussion, we assume that since we are a reader of your paper and a taxpayer in Jackson county we will be entitled to such courtesy.

I speak to the Democrats of Jackson county as a Democrat, for some at least will remember the ardor and zeal with which I supported the party in Oregon, as chairman of the county central committee and as a worker in the ranks. I might also say in passing that I supported and voted for Roosevelt at the election in 1932.

The Mail Tribune editorially has endeavored to make it appear that Al Smith and many other leading Democrats who have declined to support Roosevelt have left the Democratic party. Such is a disingenuous argument for all these men still adhere to the principles and policies of the Democratic party since its foundation and which have ever governed its deliberations until the rape of the party by the New Deal. The convention that nominated Roosevelt was in no sense a Democratic convention but a convention of office-holders beholden to the Parley machine, operated under a Tammany formula. They dared not reaffirm the pledges of the Democratic convention of 1932, which Roosevelt in grandiloquent style endorsed and pledged himself 100 percent, and as quickly after his election repudiated. This solemn pledge constituted his accepted mandate from the people and his party and upon his repudiation thereof he automatically removed himself from the Democratic party and thereby forfeited the support of every loyal intellectually honest Democrat. It can be understood, of course, how those seeking office or a handout can continue to at least give lip service to the administration.

That is why practically all of the leading Democratic newspapers of the country, as well as more than 85 percent of all leading newspapers are against the re-election of Roosevelt. They view the whole philosophy of his administration as being repugnant to the principles of the Democratic party and as well antagonistic to the American system of government. His philosophy of government being developed in the NKA and the AAA the trend of both being centralization and regimentation with the inevitable ending of individual enterprise and ultimately to a collectivist state and socialism. All perhaps agree that personally Mr. Roosevelt possessed and does possess many idealistic views and laudable ambitions, but being an egocentric and having ever lived the sheltered life of inherited wealth, with no practical knowledge of business or understanding of finance, industry or the manifold problems of government, he is easily moved through his emotions to weird experiments and impractical theories which makes him a very dangerous man to remain in office. This is especially true because of the fact his close advisers and intimate associates are not Democrats or statesmen, but men of questionable loyalty determined upon a radical change in our form of government. This is made manifest by the organization of the so-called Farmer-Labor party concerning which Mr. Roosevelt has been most fulsome in his praise. Do not be deceived or try to deceive yourselves, for as certain as Roosevelt is re-elected he will once abandon the Democratic party as no longer useful and will embrace the new Farmer-Labor party to which the machinery of the New Deal party will be transferred for the campaign of 1940.

Oregon voters at the November 3 election, are confronted with a pair of momentous issues, that can be classified, as none of their put. Besides, making a "Yes" or "No" decision on the matter of male students at colleges and universities, engaging in military drill, one hour per week, the electorate will also issue a mandate, on whether or not, the pay of Portland school teachers, shall be raised. The pay of the teachers is a matter for the Portland school board to decide, and the military drilling something for higher education institutions officials to settle.
