N. Y. Financier, Former Critic of Roosevelt, Says He Can't Swallow Landon

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—James P. Warburg, banker, one of the president's former economic advisers and subsequently one of his severest critics, will cast his vote on November 3 for the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt, he has informed Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a recent letter.

Mr. Warburg now gives his support to the Roosevelt administration, he wrote, because of the recent Franco-British-American monetary stabilization agreement and the reciprocal tariff program it worked out.

"It is impossible for me," wrote Mr. Warburg, "to support an opposition which either will not or cannot recognize that economic nationalism lies at the root of our great difficulties—an opposition which, clinging to outworn partisan tradition, offers only to repeat the mistakes of the past as a cure for the mistakes of the present.

Guiding Principles

"Hence, unless there is a fundamental change in the general alignment between now and November 3, I shall cast my vote for the re-election of the president, in the hope that your effort will continue to bear fruit and that your principles will become more and more the guiding principles of his administration."

Mr. Warburg, author of "Hell Bent for Election," and "Still Hell Bent," two books in which he vigorously assailed the administration, mentioned in his letter to the secretary of state that he had frankly stated his "objections and apprehensions"

CLIPPER PLANES SPAN PACIFIC IN REGULAR PASSENGER SERVICE

Following months of successful mail and express flights and two "preview" passenger hops, regular paid passenger service by air from California to Manila was scheduled to start over the Pan American Airways' Clipper plane route. Above is one of the huge seaplanes in full flight. in the last three years, and then observed:—

"I make no retractions."

Conference Adviser

He is a director of the Bank of Manhattan Co., New York City, head of several corporations and director on the boards of several railroads.

He was financial adviser to the World Economic Conference in London, 1933. His other books deal with monetary problems and with the manufacture of wool, cotton, hides and leather.

Mr. Warburg gives high praise in his letter to Secretary Hull's personal efforts for stabilization and trade revival. The secretary reminds him in his reply:—

"In all I have done I have but followed the leadership of the president and have only supported the policies he has laid down at all times during his administration."

Campus Chatter

Southern Oregon is well and ably represented on the Oregon campus this fall.

Such men as "Junior" Porter, assistant professor in education, may be heard giving his students that dignified "Now tomorrow we will discuss" inside stuff—He considers the "Junior" entirely unnecessary.

Fred "Brain" Colvig, flashing that engaging grin, predicts a good year for the "U." He knows whereof he speaks. Fred doesn't collect many titles, but it is well understood that even the deans desire occasional consultation.

"Little Brother" Bob Colvig has earned quite a reputation as daily fun provoker, being "artist in chief" for the Side, nickel catcher number one for Ye School.

Jack Boyle is running "Little Bro." strong competition in that line. His caricatures depicting "collich" life at its worst now cover the walls of The Duck Inn, it being nickel catcher

CHAMBER WILL STUDY OREGON PRODUCTS BAN

PORTLAND, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The Portland chamber of commerce will endeavor to learn why a number of Oregon products are restricted in California when southern goods pass into this state with comparatively little regulation.

The survey will be conducted by the agriculture committee.

tiary was ordered for Ted Despain, Crescent City, when he pleaded guilty in circuit court to assaulting Chief of Police George Sorenson with a dangerous weapon.

Despain was accused of threatening Sorenson and a girl with a gun.
