Mopping Up Fires—Crew of 12 men from the Union Creek CCC spike camp was today mopping up a small snag fire in an old burn at the head of Sugar Pine creek about 18 miles above Trail. The blaze covered less than an acre. It was discovered Saturday morning and was attributed by the Rouge river national forest service to a careless smoker. Highland snows had today reduced fire hazards somewhat excepting in the Applegate region where the forest remains dangerously dry. It was reported by K. P. McReynolds, assistant forester in charge of fire suppression. All lookouts are being kept on the job. The latest fire has been held on duty here in several years. Mr. McReynolds stated.

Wall St. Report NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP)—Buying in mining issues helped to stiffen the stock market today although numerous leaders were in the losing column at the close.

Mystery Picture Delights Crowds In Rialto's Show Audiences agree that one of the greatest double bill programs ever brought to the Rialto theater on their new two-major feature policy was presented to the patrons last night in the form of "The President's Mystery," which starred Henry Wilton and Betty Furness and "The Big Game," which features James Gleason, Bruce Cabot, June Travis, Andy Devine, Philip Huston and eight of America's greatest All-America stars.

The story of "The President's Mystery" was conceived by the chief executive and written for Liberty magazine by six leading authors, Rita Welman, Rupert Hughes, Samuel Hopkins Adams, S. Van Dine, Anthony Abbot and John Erskine. It dealt with a corporation lawyer who, wearied and shamed by his own lobbying activities in congress, decides to break all connections with his past life, liquidate his fortune and disappear.

The tale moves on at a fascinating pace, developing incidents which make it impossible for him ever to return to his past life.

A stirring story of college football and campus capers, "The Big Game," pokes rare fun at the alleged professionalism in college football and reveals its more sinister phases in and about the gambling world. Highlights of the film are the sensational plays of such noted All-America football stars as Jay Berwanger, Bill Stokewich, Bobby Wilson, Monk Mowbray, King Kong Klein, Gomer Jones, Bonse Hamilton and Frank Alustia. The picture is one of the most exciting that has come to the screen in months.

Lovely Feminine Stars In Unusual Craterian Story "Men? Never let them know you love them—keep laughing at them and they can't hurt you! While it takes a while! But no tears when they're cided!"

That's what four lovely, lovely ladies say in "Ladies in Love," but what they do makes the picture that opened yesterday at the Craterian theater one of the screen's most fascinating entertainments.

With one of the most brilliant and exciting combinations of feminine personalities ever to appear in one picture—Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett and Simone Simon supported by Don Ameche, Paul Lukas, Tyrone Power, Jr., and Alan Mowbray, "Ladies in Love" tells a brilliantly unusual story, with each of the four feminine players thrilling you in her own way.

Janet, who, incredibly, feeds rabbits for a living; Loretta, a chorus girl in a musical show, and Constance, a mannequin who wants a millionaire, pool their resources and take a small partnership.

"Extremely happy in their new home, the girls eagerly play for the romances they intend to have, and dream of the men they love. Janet adores Don Ameche, a young doctor who occasionally employs her. Loretta has fallen in love with a wealthy young man, who, however, is already engaged. Constance is enjoying a gay round of pleasure and excitement with Paul Lukas, a mining engineer on vacation from South America.

When an opportunity for a better job presents itself, Janet leaves her doctor and takes a job as valet to Alan Mowbray, a famous magician. Loretta, in the meantime, finds out that her beloved is to marry his fiancée in the very near future, and Constance, who has told Lukas that she does not believe in love, except for the moment, finds that in him she has found a love beyond her greatest dreams.

Between Constance and Lukas, however, comes Simone Simon, an appealing and entrancingly beautiful young girl who knows what she wants and is out to get it—a husband.

News Behind The News (Continued from Page One) easily imagine the stir created in both Washington and New York. The president could probably have picked a broker here and there from among the cliff dwellers around Broad and Wall who might be considered more influential than these three, but the selected trio certainly represented tops in the financial district or very close to it.

They filed into the presidential sanctum, remained more than fifteen minutes and filed out again. They would not say what the conference was about. Nor was any satisfactory reason for the conference offered later by the president. Both parties tried to pass it off as a social visit, but Wall Street guessed. As one financial leader explained the situation: "Mr. Roosevelt and brokers do not mix socially these days."

Even yet, some authorities suspect there was some smart work at the cross streets, which will eventually come out. They are wrong. What happened is this: The three brokers, who are the president's representatives, had a New Deal official, present, told them they were all wrong about Mr. Roosevelt. He suggested they would really like him if they got to know him and asked if they would like to meet him. They gave the polite answer and, about three days later, again came a White House invitation. In the meeting, Mr. Roosevelt, who had been talking and kept it confined to observations about the weather and such relatively small matters. Nobody said anything of the slightest importance.

The New Deal arranger of it was also wrong. For once the president's friendly charm failed to work. The three brokers returned to their duties unimpressed.

The senate campaign investigators came out with the results of another brilliant expose the other day, but no one printed it.

The committee secretary called in newsmen to tell them the results of the committee's log and hard investigation of charges that the FWA is mixed up in Pennsylvania politics. He started reading a report made to the committee by its investigator, Louis Glavis. The words had a familiar sound. After the second paragraph, the reporters recognized Glavis' report as being exactly what Harry Hopkins had said after an impartial investigation of himself.

It was not clear whether Glavis had received his report from Hopkins or Hopkins from Glavis. But inasmuch as both reports were largely denials from local FWA officials, it appeared possible that they represented only a duplication of details.

Next the committee handed out a statement showing that a considerable percentage of WPA supervisors were Republicans. Inquiry developed that Eddie Jones, WPA chief in Pennsylvania, had furnished the only information on which this committee announcement was made. Inasmuch as Jones is the man being charged with creating a political machine out of WPA, some reporters suggested that he might be a biased witness in favor of himself.

Before the minor question could be answered, another reporter asked how come Jones knew the political affiliations of all his subordinates, if politics is the man being charged with creating a political machine out of WPA. Some reporters suggested that he might be a biased witness in favor of himself.
