BOYS BROUGHT FLOODS BY KILLING LIZARDS
SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP)—Mexican boys taught by Miss Ruth Rich believe they know what caused the disastrous floods here this fall. They killed too many green lizards, the teacher said the boys confided in her. The boys, having faith in the old belief that killing lizards and turning their bellies up to the sun will bring rain, staged a wholesale slaughter of lizards when the community needed rain badly. The next day rain started falling and didn't stop until the city was flooded.

OIL WELL DRILLING GROWS IN W. VIRGINIA
CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—Department of mines records show that gas and oil well drilling equipment is once more becoming a familiar sight in the West Virginia hinterlands—assuming the proportions it reached at the turn of the century. Director N. P. Rhinehart said during the first nine months of 1935 his department granted 419 permits for wells compared to 403 in 1935.

Joint Installation Tomorrow Night

Public joint installation of officers has been announced by the Crater Lake post 1933, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the auxiliary for tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the armory. A covered dish dinner is to precede the meeting in the dining room of the armory at 7 o'clock, to which have been invited the posts and auxiliaries of Grants Pass and Ashland and heads of local patriotic societies. Post officers will be installed first by John Snellstrom of Eugene, senior vice-commander of the department of Oregon, who is to come here for the occasion. The following heads will be installed by the post: Commander, E. W. Wall; senior vice-commander, Edwin Taylor; junior vice-commander, Philip Todd; chaplain, Karl Knudsen; quartermaster, John Butler; officer of the day, Clare Clifton. This will be Commander Wall's second term in the office and members feel that this speaks well for his untiring work for the organization and the high esteem in which he is held by his overseas companions. Intermission will divide the two ceremonies, the period to be filled by music. Lillian Flynn, a past officer of the department of Oregon, will install auxiliary officers as follows: President, Pauline Wood; senior vice-president, Margaret Ingling; junior vice-president, Chloe Baruhart; chaplain, Lillian Flynn; patriotic instructor, Dorothy Wandrey; treasurer, Lenore Wall; secretary, Julie Canfield; color bearers, Betty O'Brien, Auguste Hall and Josephine Knox; musician, Lenore Wall; and historian, Mildred Taylor. Dancing is to follow the ceremonies and a cordial invitation is extended to all veterans and their friends.

Allen and Burns in Sunday Film

Grace Allen has the time of her life in "The Big Broadcast of 1937," the girl who stole the show in opening Sunday at the Craterian theatre. What with her own partner, George Burns, supplemented by Jack Benny, Gracie discovers new methods of driving everyone nuts. In addition to the three afore-mentioned players, "The Big Broadcast of 1937" boasts an outstanding cast of entertainers. Among those featured spots are Bob Burns (and, of course, his Banooka); Martha Raye, the girl who stole the show in "Rhythm on the Range"; Benny Goodman and his swing orchestra; Shirley Ross and Ray Milland for romance; Frank Forest, the new radio "find"; Benny Fields, a show all by himself; Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra; Louis DeFron and Eleanor Whitney, the country's two fastest tap stoppers; Larry Adler, harmonica wizard; Virginia Weidler, David Holt and Billy Lee.

Grape Prices Rise

Adventure Picture Coming to Rialto

The deadliest and most treacherous garden spot in the world is that narrow strip of land along the Gulf of Siam, near the equator, known as the Malayan Peninsula. Over the portal of this garden nature has placed a sign, "White Man, Keep Out." Many white men have disregarded this warning and gone in; but few have returned to tell the story of primitive savagery and venomous animal life that only this wild, chaotic region can weave, for in this impenetrable jungle, every shrub and vine is literally loaded with poison. Death lurks in the underbrush, where slithering, ferocious monsters crawl upon their bellies — in the bite of one misquito — in the trees where hang tons of deadly pythons. Such it was that Harry Schenk and his fearless band of explorers met when they entered this forbidden land to bring patrons of the Rialto theatre their greatest thrill in the picture they risked their lives to film, "Beyond Bengal." The picture, besides having thrilling adventure, also has a romance that was written by nature herself. "Beyond Bengal" plays at the Rialto theatre tomorrow and Saturday on the double bill program with Harold Bell Wright's "Wild Brian Kent," which stars Ralph Bellamy with Mae Clarke in support.
