OLD PAPERS SHOW ODD NEWS TRENDS

AUSTIN, Tex.—(UP)—News as it was written and displayed more than 100 years ago is being exhibited at the University of Texas.

Copies of early Texas papers, dating back to 1830 are included in the exhibit. Examination of the papers indicates that different things made news during the "barbed wire and rawhide" era of Texas.

The editor of the Telegraph and Texas Register, published in San Felipe de Austin, October 17, 1835, preferred poetry to news. More than one-third of his front page is devoted to a poem, "Dawn."

In another paper concerning Texas independence covers all the page. In still another half of the front page is devoted to advertising. The rest of the page contains stories on the climate of Australia and the laws passed at the third session of the fourth congress.

In the January 12, 1855, edition of the Dallas Herald appears a story of an engagement fought in the Civil war. It is listed simply as "In Sunday's Mail."

To insure that China's elections are 100 percent Chinese and, incidentally, to benefit native manufacturers, Nanjing has ordered that all ballot sheets be made of paper made in China.

California produced enough eggs in 1935 to serve to every citizen of the United States six mornings of the year.

The zampa plant of Florida is a rare survivor of the virtually extinct cycads of the carboniferous age.
