

Opponents of Roosevelt Advised to Quit Balking Get In Step With Times

Professor of Political Economy Asserts
Social Alterations Are Inevitable
Landon, Backers Lack Vision

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 18.—(AP)—William Z. Ripley, professor emeritus of political economy at Harvard, asserted today in talking with newspapermen that it was time for opponents of President Roosevelt to "quit obstructing, quit growling," and help in making "inevitable" social alterations.

"Great changes are taking place," said Professor Ripley, whose volume entitled "Main Street and Wall Street" attracted wide attention ten years ago, and to the influence of which some quarters have attributed establishment of the securities and exchange commission.

Need of Change Seen
"Some are material, others are spiritual. The president sensed the feeling among the workers that they had left their affairs too long in the hands of the bankers, the lawyers and the heavily propertyed classes."

In granting an interview, Professor Ripley said he considered the time "appropriate," because he believed "many of those who opposed President Roosevelt did not realize the weakness of his opponent."

Explaining he wished his remarks to be received as a "message from the liberal east to the liberal west," Professor Ripley continued:

G. O. P. Lacking in Vision
"Governor Landon, his backers, and those who 'took a walk' from the president lacked the vision to see what was going on in the worker's mind."

"In this civilization, ownership of property used to, and should, carry with it a responsibility to other men. The Krugers, the Inshuls, the Van Swingers, the bankers and the big corporate businessmen ignored that responsibility, and they came to grief."

"The election can be interpreted as an expression of the resentment of the laboring man and the white-collar worker to this disproportionate exercise of power over their lives. Sixteen million middle class investors felt that they had been sold out. They expressed their resentment, and their approval of those who were helping them, at the polls."

For thirty years, Professor Ripley taught labor problems at Harvard and during the war he was in charge of labor relations in war department contracts. For two years he was neutral chairman of the national adjustment commission which handled a long dispute between ship owners and longshoremen. He also wrote a major portion of the report on which the eight-hour law for railroads is based.

Presidents Kidstep
During the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, he said, he tried to convince those presidents of the reality of problems which were not faced until President was elected. But Coolidge, he said, "was too cautious and lax" to act, and Hoover afraid his party "would not stand for the things which must be done."

"The great industrialists believe," he said, "that because they pay good wages—when they do pay good wages—and because they build swimming pools and recreation halls, they are going to satisfy the workers. When they offer wage increases, as the steel industry and others now are doing, they are trying to buy contentment among their workers."

"But that is not what the workers want. They want a voice in the fixing of the wages for which they work, and the conditions under which they work. They want a status of equality with the boss upon which these matters can be discussed. That is true collective bargaining."

Believes Lewis Right
Professor Ripley said he believed John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine workers, was completely right within the northwestern limits of Madrid, subsided into sporadic exchanges of rifle and machine gun fire.

The principal streets of Madrid teemed with the subway crowds going about their business.

Shaken by yesterday's terrific attack but still confident of victory, socialist militia manned the barricades and poured machine gun and rifle fire on the insurgents in University City.

The most experienced soldiers were thrown as shock troops against the fascist army, while the militia, with little experience under fire, was stationed in the secondary line of defense.

From the extensive fascist use of artillery and aviation during the 14-day siege of the capital, military observers deduced that the enemy was unwilling to risk the loss of men by infantry assault.

PRESIDENT STARTS GOOD WILL JAUNT TO SOUTH AMERICA

Mr. Roosevelt is to address the Buenos Aires peace parley, Dec. 1.

Twenty-one American republics will participate in the conference which Mr. Roosevelt called last summer as a step toward making the spirit of peace on the western hemisphere a "practical and living fact."

The president also will visit Brazil and Uruguay before returning to Washington the middle of next month.

However, many things will happen before June, 1939.

Third party talk continues to swirl around the bulk of John Lewis, but behind it, unobserved, is the more realistic figure of Governor Phil La Follette of Wisconsin. At least, the men who look ahead see it that way.

Lewis has a thousand bridges yet to cross, and he may need pontones before 1940. Attention is currently centered on him because the first requisite for his presidential candidacy was complied with the other day. His biography by Cecil Carnes was published, with the modest sub-title of "Leader of Labor," but it contained such phrases as these: "He would like to be president . . . he is an orator to match Bryan, an ego as nicely balanced as that of Mussolini . . . His Americanism is truer than Hearst's . . . He has the charm of Roosevelt and the dash of the late Huey Long . . ."

Governor Phil's biography, when published, will not mention this one, but his strategic position is better. He has the contacts here in the senate and in the New Deal which will bring him forward in the next few years. Lewis is all labor and would have a hard time getting the farmer half and possibly labor, also.

The New Dealers are watching this situation more closely than you know.

The A. F. of L. executive council is suggesting a constitutional amendment, if necessary, to preserve social security. This makes three constitutional amendments now involved in serious discussion, NRA, AAA and SS. It also makes clear what many a presidential counselor has begun to suspect about any constitutional amendments. The trouble is not where to start them, but where to stop them if they are ever started.

Sportsmen consider it had business to make up the rules of their games as they go along. A changed rule may become immediately desirable to meet a particular situation in a particular game, but if you start that, everyone concedes you will ruin the game in the end. In rules for government, the consequences are likely to be more unsatisfactory.

A better method in government, sport or individual living is to re-adjust your plans to accomplish your aims without changing the rules.

This may explain why Mr. Roosevelt is reported to be (a) not listening particularly closely to John Lewis, who wants a constitutional NRA amendment, (b) shying away from the Edward O'Neal suggestion of an AAA constitutional amendment, and (c) unimpressed by the A. F. of L. suggestion of an SS amendment, "if necessary."

CHAMBER'S PLAN AIDING DISPOSAL SURPLUS TURKS

Yesterday immediately thought of new angles that could be developed. A. S. Rosenbaum, passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, suggested that turkeys could be sent now as gifts to friends living in other parts of the country. He himself, it was learned, yesterday bought five turkeys and sent them to friends in Portland and San Francisco. It is understood the birds can be sent as far as New York without any special wrapping or handling and if sent now they will reach distant points in time for Thanksgiving. The chamber announced that others also had planned to send turkeys to friends.

Another suggestion made today was that service clubs and church societies serve turkey at all dinners they are to hold before Thanksgiving. The chamber approved the suggestion and announced all service clubs would be asked to have turkey served at their lunches and dinners next week.

It was pointed out that church and other societies might create goodwill and thus procure increased support by serving turkey. In this way aid would be given to a worthy cause, chamber officials said.

A talk on salesmanship was given at the weekly dinner-meeting of the Active club in the Hotel Medford last night by G. C. Briggs, sales manager here for the Standard Oil company of California.

Mr. Briggs traced the evolution of merchandising and described how salesmanship contributes to general progress.

The club was entertained by a harmonica band composed of Reginald Pifer, Merle Detrich, Robert Drager and Dean Gribes, all junior high school students. The boys played three numbers and were warmly applauded.

Guests last night were Capt. Richard E. Gehler, veterinarian of the Medford CCC district, and James Namits, representative of the W. P. Fuller company.

The regular dinner-meeting will be omitted next week, it was announced. Instead, the Medford and Ashland clubs will unite at a dinner-dance to be given at the Chateau next Wednesday for members and their ladies by the non-charter members of both chapters. Arrangements for the local club are in charge of Jack Butler and Don Cruikshank. Otto Phillabaum is chairman for the Ashland chapter.

Ashcraft Receives Packard Shipment For Display Here

A carload of new 1937 Packards arrived today and will be placed on display in the new Packard showroom, located one door north of the former Ashland, according to Perry Ashcraft, local Packard dealer.

Mr. Ashcraft says: "Production and sale of Packard cars are continuing at a rate far in excess of all previous records for the company's entire history."

Shipments of cars for October were 11,036 and deliveries were 9,211. In September shipments were 10,161 and deliveries were 8,334. These figures compare with September shipments of 3,991 in 1935 and October 1935 shipments of 3,043 and October 1935 deliveries were 3,979.

The highest previous record of monthly shipments in the company's history was established in April 1936 with 7,826.

Mr. Ashcraft added that, despite the high rate of factory production, unfilled orders are increasing in number.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?
FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shriveled one whole week in every month.
You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.
For three generations one woman has told another how to get "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three decades of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."
Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and get "Smiling Through!"
