BANDON SEEKS DATA FROM ALL HOLDERS OF ITS SECURITIES

Holders of outstanding bonds and warrants of the City of Bandon were requested by the council of that place today to get in touch with the office of Gilbert E. Gable, rehabilitation commissioner. An effort is being made to arrange a tentative settlement so that the obligations can be subsequently taken up with the proper agencies of the state and federal government.

Immediate action by security holders was urged so that the work of solving the debt problem of the city, recently destroyed by fire, may be expedited.

A letter from Mr. Gable states: "The City of Bandon is making a valiant and courageous effort to pull itself out of its fire disaster and as a necessary first step we are attempting to list the outstanding obligations of the city in taxes, bonds and warrants and work out a plan for their liquidation."

"Early investigation indicates that both warrants and bonds are spread over a large territory and especially the bonds are held by banks and individuals throughout the entire section."

Mr. Gable said it would be extremely helpful if creditors would communicate with his office as quickly as possible. His office is situated in the former Red Cross warehouse, where a list of all outstanding obligations is being compiled.

HUNTER WILL RUN LANGUAGE SCHOOL

Announcement was made today of the opening by J. G. Hunter of the Medford School of Languages and International Business in room 208 of the Farmers & Fruitgrowers bank building.

All modern languages will be taught as demand for them develops but emphasis will be placed for the present on Spanish, Mr. Hunter said. Need for a command of Spanish is seen by Mr. Hunter in the expanding trade between this country and Latin America, an impetus to which he expects to be given by the conference in Buenos Aires.

To prepare students for practical work in foreign trade, Mr. Hunter will also give a course in international business. An authoritative textbook will be used in the course, he said.

Mr. Hunter has been conducting Spanish classes as a federal project and is well known here. The government-financed classes have ended.

SCHOOL GYMBOREE AT CENTRAL POINT

Senior class of the Central Point high school is sponsoring a "gymboeree" house warming celebration for the remodeled gymnasium at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, it was announced today by H. P. Jewett, principal.

The program includes a drama by Nancy Blake, a stunt by the Letterman's club and other features. Major part of the program will be presented in the high school auditorium where comfortable seating accommodations are ample, Mr. Jewett stated. Later the audience will be taken to the gymnasium to see the improvements and to witness various school stunts. Refreshments also will be available in the gymnasium.

BUDGET SIGNING WAITS COUNTY COURT RETURN

Formal signing of the Jackson county budget for 1936, will be done upon return of the county court from the annual convention of the Oregon County Judges and Commissioners, underway this week in Portland, County Judge Day, and Commissioners Billings and Caster, are attending the session.

The budget was approved without changes at a public hearing in the courthouse last Friday. The budget is expected to be turned over next week to Assessor Coleman for extension on the tax rolls and fixing of the levies.

LEGION POST TO HELP NEW BANDON LIBRARY

To assist in the rehabilitation program at Bandon, recently destroyed by fire, Medford post of the American Legion today issued an appeal for books to be forwarded to the new Bandon library.

Books of travel, science, history, fiction, in fact, any good reading matter, whether new or old, will be welcome, state local post officials. Contributions may be left at the office of adjutant Lee Garlock in the Gates Auto Co. on North Riverside avenue, or, if preferred, one may phone 312 and a car will call to pick them up.

Veterans attending the Legion stag party at the K. P. hall tomorrow night are urged to bring one or more books with them to help this endeavor by the local post.

Anthony Adverse Picture Scoring Hit Holly Crowd

Much has been said and written about "Anthony Adverse," the motion picture version of Hervey Allen's famous best-seller. Yesterday, local theater-goers had the opportunity of seeing the film version on the Holly theater screen, where it opened its three-day run, with Fredric March playing the title role of Anthony.

In the recent several months, many fine pictures have come from Hollywood. "Anthony Adverse" is one of those pictures, one that offers the romance and drama of life has been caught with vivid realism. Living romance and drama have been transferred to the screen with sincerity and faithfulness. It is laid down honestly and in such a straightforward spirit that it is beyond argument that the picture holds the interest and satisfies anyone who sees it.

"Anthony Adverse" undoubtedly was a daring and risky story to attempt to picture. Intelligently treated, there is no possibility for censorable objection on ethical or moral grounds. It is solid, substantial entertainment.

The story follows the life of Anthony, a child of love and passion beyond the pale; and his boyhood in a convent school; his apprenticeship to Bonnyfeather, whose knowledge of being the boy's grandfather results in a bond of affection and understanding between the two. Then there is the melodrama engendered by Faith, who knows that in this child there is something menacing to her own greed and avarice. The chapter is made even more beautiful as it presents the love story of Anthony and Angela.

The next chapter takes Anthony to Cuba, then to Africa and back again to France, where he finds his benefactor dead, and Angela is a great operative star, and Napoleon's paragon. Only in his seven-year-old son does he see a vision of new hopes, a life together with the boy in America.

The story is told with finish and conviction by a worthy cast that includes, besides Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Edmund Gwenn, Claude Rains, Anita Louise, Gale Sondergaard, Stella Duns, Ralph Morgan, Henry O'Neill, Luis Alberni and many others who are familiar to showgoers.

"Give Me Your Heart," which had its local premiere at the Rialto theater yesterday where it opened a three-day run, held audiences spellbound by its beauty and entrance-making and the sheer power of its dynamic drama.

The picture stars Miss Kay Francis in a "custom made" role with George Brent, Henry Stephenson, Roland Young, F. L. B. Inscourt, Patric Knowles and Helen Flint in support. Miss Francis plays a young English girl, reared in Italy, who loves an English nobleman already possessed of an invalid wife.

The child of their union is adopted by the deceived wife, who loves it as her own. Later she recovers from her invalidism and regains the complete love of her husband. Meanwhile Miss Francis has gone to America, where she meets and marries a prominent business man.

She is not happy, however. She grieves for her English child, and her nerves are at the snapping point when an English playwright, who knows both the girl and the nobleman intimately, secretly arranges a meeting between the two couples.

Ross Alexander and Glenda Farrell get a hand for their performance in "Here Comes Carter," which plays as the added feature with "Give Me Your Heart." Others in the cast of "Here Comes Carter" are Anne Nagel.

RANGE BENEFITS OPEN TO NOV. 25

Word has been received that the applications for benefit payments under the range program instituted by the soil conservation service will not be received after November 23, states county agent, R. G. Fowler today.

As the time is so short for the completion of this program it was thought best that applications be stopped in order to allow enough time between now and the 31st of December for completion of the work necessary.

A number of Jackson county livestock men are taking advantage of this opportunity for improving ranges and work has already commenced on several ranches in the way of developing springs, building fences, etc.

No applications will be received after Wednesday, Nov. 25.
