LEGAL NOTICES

Notice of Sheriff's Sale

By virtue of an execution in foreclosure duly issued out of and under the seal of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, in and for the County of Jackson, to me directed and dated on the 20th day of November, 1936, in a certain action therein, wherein the State of Oregon, represented and acting by the World War Veterans' State Aid Commission as plaintiff, recovered judgment against John F. Matzger and Ruby Matzger the defendants, for the sum of $2359.07, together with interest thereon at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from June 30, 1935; for the further sum of $10.00 abstract fees, with costs and disbursements taxed at $8.10 and the further sum of $150.00 as attorney's fees, which judgment was enrolled and docketed in the clerk's office of said Court in said County on the 20th day of November, 1936.

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to the terms of the said execution, I will on the 26th day of December, 1936 at 10:00 o'clock a. m., at the front door of the Courthouse in the City of Medford, in Jackson County, Oregon, offer for sale and will sell at public auction for cash to the highest bidder, to satisfy said judgment, together with the costs of this sale, subject to redemption as provided by law, all of the right, title and interest that the said defendants, John F. Matzger, sometimes known as J. F. Matzger, and Gladys K. Matzger, husband wife, Ruby Matzger, and W. H. Lydiard, had on the 12th day of April, 1926, or now have in and to the following described property, situated in the County of Jackson, State of Oregon, to-wit:

Beginning at a point in the City of Medford, Jackson County, Oregon, one hundred fifty-three (153) feet south of the northeast corner of block two (2), in Galloway's Addition to said City; running thence south on the west line of said Laurel street forty-seven (47) feet; thence west one hundred (100) feet; thence north forty-seven (47) feet; thence east one hundred (100) feet to the place of beginning, situated in the County of Jackson and State of Oregon.

Dated this 20th day of November, 1936.

SYD I. BROWN, Sheriff of Jackson County, Oregon.
By Howard Gault, Deputy.

Notice

In the County Court of the State of Oregon, for Jackson County.
In the Matter of the Estate of William K. Godding, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned Administrator has filed his Final Account and Report in the above entitled matter, and the above entitled Court has fixed December 22nd, 1936, at 10 o'clock A. M., in the County Court Room, in the Court House, in Medford, Jackson County, Oregon, as the time and place for hearing objections to said Final Account and Report, and for the settlement thereof.

EARL GODDING, Administrator.

Notice

Notice is hereby given that the final account of Lucy M. Lindley, as Administratrix of the Estate of Susan G. Malster, Deceased, has been filed in the County Court of Jackson County, State of Oregon, and that the 15th day of December, 1936, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M., has been duly appointed for the hearing of objections to such final account and settlement thereof, at which time any person interested in such estate may appear and file objections thereto in writing and contest the same.

Dated this 16th day of November, 1936.

LUCY M. LINDLEY,
Administratrix.

Notice to Creditors

Notice is hereby given that I have been appointed by the County Court of Jackson County, Oregon, Administrator of the estate of Hannah M. Hoglund, also known as Hannah M. Hansen, deceased, and have qualified. All persons having claims against said estate are hereby notified to present them, with proper vouchers, and duly verified, to me at the office of Harry C. Skyrman, attorney for said estate at Room 409 Medford Center Building, in Medford, Oregon, within six months from the date of this notice. Dated and first published November 16th, 1936.

Wings For Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

Chapter One

Breakfast At The Warrens'

"B-R-R-R . . ."

At the harsh jangle of the alarm clock, Sally Warren started wide awake. For a moment she stared with dream-clouded eyes at the pink roses on the wall-paper, while the bell wrangled persistently. Then, as the familiar objects of her room began to emerge clearly, she reached for the clock and turned off the alarm with a practiced finger.

She did not get up immediately, for this was the moment Sally loved, the time between waking and rising when she lay quietly in the old walnut bed, with the blue and white patchwork quilt drawn up under her chin. From where she lay, she could look straight into the upper branches of the apple tree, spreading out pink and white and green over the side yard.

But this morning Sally had more exciting prospects before her than the brightness of the April day. She was going to work. At nine o'clock she would walk into the editorial room of the Warrenton Courier and sit down at her own desk to begin her first real job.

Already she had been to the newspaper office and gone over her duties with Miss Delia Cotton, the spinster society editor who was at last giving in to ill health and retiring. Sally had been "helping out" with the society page for some time, but this morning she would actually begin to edit the society page — weddings, teas, card parties and all.

The odor of frying bacon made Sally jump out of bed with guilty haste, for that meant her stepmother, Adelaide, was beginning breakfast. And breakfast had hitherto been Sally's job.

Briefly she considered her three presentable spring dresses, and decided on the green linen. As she stood before the chest of drawers for one last peek at herself before she went downstairs, she thought, "I'm at least neat and businesslike." Miss Delia Cotton would have said that she looked "like a perfect lady" and so she did with her trim figure and small hands and feet. Above the dainty collar of her blouse, Sally's face rose clear and cameo-cut, her skin healthily warm, eyes bright and alive.

She was a small, spare woman, a New Englander who had never become accustomed to the easy ways of the southern family and community into which she had married and often bewailed the fate that had led her to come south in the days when she was a trained nurse and had followed her charge, old Hester Eaton, to Warrenton. Here she had been ever since the death of Hester when she married Robert Warren and came to the big square frame house as foster mother to his four-year-old daughter Sally.

"Let me finish the bread," said Sally gently. She knew how her stepmother disliked cooking. But even in the days when they could afford a servant, Adelaide Warren had refused to have one because they were "lazy and thriftless." To Sally, who really liked it, had fallen the major share of the cooking.

"I'm just about through now," said Adelaide grudgingly, but giving over the biscuit cutter. "Didn't your alarm go off this morning?"

"Yes—I was just plain lazy," said Sally assembling the breakfast with skilful hands. "I can't budge the twins, either."

"Ray was up studying till land knows when," said his mother. "And Tip was out at that party till all hours. It seems as if she's just starved for sleep. A growing girl like that can't have too much sleep, and she's got to take it at this end of the night or miss some of her good time."

Mrs. Warren herself had married late and worked hard before her marriage so that she felt she had missed a good deal of her own "good time." Although Sally was only 22, four years older than Tip and Ray, she thought of herself as much older and the twins were just as much "the children" to Sally as they were to their mother.

A Girl Needs Good Clothes

ANOTHER cat for Tip and Ray brought Robert Warren himself to the breakfast table. Tall and a little stooped, Sally's father had the gentle, courteous manner of the traditional southern gentleman. He had never been a money-maker but he had been satisfied with his income as a small town lawyer and his position as a member of one of the oldest families in the town until his northern wife had convinced him that he was a failure. The loss of his small investments had lessened his self respect and thinned his hair. Sally, pulling out his chair for him and giving him his newspaper, paused to kiss his bald spot.

"Another year like this last one and you'll look like Deacon Prentiss on top, darling," she told him.

"Your mother, Sally," said Robert Warren, "was a charming woman, a Christian, and a lady, though she didn't know what work was in the sense that you use the word. She presided over her house, she had her social life, her child, her charities—she was a woman who graced her home."

"I'm sorry, Robert, if you feel it is necessary to speak to Sally in this way. If I've not made you a good wife—the kind you expected, then I'm sorry for it, but as God is my witness I've done my best, even though you and Sally have made it hard for me." Her voice trembling with anger and hurt, Mrs. Warren turned away and fumbled in the china closet.

"I beg your pardon, Adelaide," said Robert Warren. "You've been all that—that you should be to me. It's I who haven't done my best. I'm a failure. Every day brings it home to me more and more as I see you and the children doing without things and working when you should be enjoying yourselves."

"Of course," said Mrs. Warren, rallying to an argument. "I know you'd be well enough pleased if I went gallivanting off to every tea-party I was invited to—"

"And that reminds me," interrupted Sally, "that you must be sure to tell me of any tea-parties or any other kind of parties you hear about, because that's what my page in the paper's made up of."

"Thought you were going to be a real reporter," said Ray, coming into the dining room with a book in his hand. "That kind of stuff ought to be left out of newspapers."

"You better be glad it's in 'em, or I wouldn't have a job." She served Ray's plate with omelet while he opened his book.

Sally launches her new life at the Courier tomorrow.

Sally was taking over the society page at the Warrenton Courier.

'I Was Just Plain Lazy'

ON the way downstairs Sally stopped to knock at the twins' doors. Her own room separated theirs from each other just as she stood between the twins themselves in their squabbles—a sort of friendly no man's land. She had to rap twice for each of them and she was late at that. Ray always had some last minute studying to do and Tip had to be called and threatened for at least half an hour. Perhaps Sally mused she wouldn't be calling the twins at all this time next year. In less than two months they would be finished with high school, and next year Ray would go off to college all went well. And Tip—what would pretty fly-away Tip do when she no longer had even the slender ties of high school to bind her down to seriousness? Sally didn't know, but at least she didn't have time to worry about Tip this morning.

As she went through the dining room, she noticed that the table was set. Her stepmother must have risen much earlier than usual because Sally was starting to work.

"Mother!" she cried, at sight of Adelaide Warren bent over the table cutting out dough in a flurry of flour. "You're making biscuits. You must have got up terribly early—"

"Somebody had to get up," said her stepmother sharply.

"Your mother, Sally," said Robert Warren, "was a charming woman, a Christian, and a lady, though she didn't know what work was in the sense that you use the word. She presided over her house, she had her social life, her child, her charities—she was a woman who graced her home."

"I'm sorry, Robert, if you feel it is necessary to speak to Sally in this way. If I've not made you a good wife—the kind you expected, then I'm sorry for it, but as God is my witness I've done my best, even though you and Sally have made it hard for me." Her voice trembling with anger and hurt, Mrs. Warren turned away and fumbled in the china closet.

"I beg your pardon, Adelaide," said Robert Warren. "You've been all that—that you should be to me. It's I who haven't done my best. I'm a failure. Every day brings it home to me more and more as I see you and the children doing without things and working when you should be enjoying yourselves."

"Of course," said Mrs. Warren, rallying to an argument. "I know you'd be well enough pleased if I went gallivanting off to every tea-party I was invited to—"

"And that reminds me," interrupted Sally, "that you must be sure to tell me of any tea-parties or any other kind of parties you hear about, because that's what my page in the paper's made up of."

"Thought you were going to be a real reporter," said Ray, coming into the dining room with a book in his hand. "That kind of stuff ought to be left out of newspapers."

"You better be glad it's in 'em, or I wouldn't have a job." She served Ray's plate with omelet while he opened his book.
