Singer Captivates In Craterian Film

Doff your hats to one of the most completely captivating pictures ever to grace a local screen. At the Craterian theater yesterday the new Grace Moore vehicle, "When You're in Love," unfolded itself to the undisturbed pleasure of those gathered for the occasion.

Grace Moore could start her career from this moment on, so admirably does she acquit herself in "When You're in Love." There is a freshness, a newness about the opera star that is entrancing, and she has never been in lovelier voice. Happy, too, are the selections she sings. For sheer appeal there are few numbers more exciting than "Siboney," Schubert's "Serenade" and the "Waltz Aria" from Verdi's "Romeo and Juliet" and "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly."

Add to these two extremely good new numbers by Jerome Kern and Dorothy Field, "Our Song" and "Whistling Boy" as well as "Vivid Dreams" from "Tovarich," "In the Gloaming" and "Minnie the Moocher" and you have Miss Moore literally running the well-known musical gamut.

Serving as Miss Moore's leading man in this film is tall-dark-and-handsome Cary Grant. In the pleasing role of a fast-talking, hard-drinking American artist in Mexico, Grant and you have Miss Moore literally running the well-known musical gamut.

But the surprise is yet to come. The film treats its audience to a story that would be welcome even without music. It is a deliciously comic-eyed yarn cooked up by that master of screen writers, Robert Riskin, who penned such comedy hits as "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "It Happened One Night."
