Detailed Notes From New York.

NEW YORK (AP)—Belts made up of two slender straps accentuate narrow waists. One strap marks the natural waistline—the other, an artificial line two inches above.

Stocking manufacturers are making valiant attempts to create sturdy products. One company reinforces the silk with a linen twist. Another makes use of durable mesh designs.

You can learn a lot from scarfs these days. On some of them are sprawled the names of almost every large city in the world. Others tell all about the best-known cocktail bars in New York.

Summer overalls have cuffs that can be turned up for wading in the surf. The newest adaptation of last year's popular fashion barely reaches the knee, and is very baggy.

The characteristic overall straps remain the same. The one-button type of glove remains in demand, despite predictions of glove wholesalers that elbow-length models would be worn with the new short-sleeved spring dresses. Forearms, however, stay exposed.

Club Women to Entertain Guests. Women of the Grants Pass golf club will be guests of the Medford ladies at the local course tomorrow afternoon, regular ladies' day at the Rogue Valley Golf club.

Luncheon at the clubhouse is planned for 12:30 o'clock and will be followed by play of both groups during the afternoon. All new members of the local club are particularly urged to be present by Mrs. F. G. Bunch, women's president.

Mrs. Brewer Returns Home. Returning to her home here this week-end was Mrs. C. M. Brewer, who has been visiting in the north. She was the guest of her mother and other relatives and friends in Seattle and Everett, Wn.

Mrs. Brewer was away for ten days.

EDDIE AND WALLIS STAGE REUNION AT DOOR OF CHATEAU

on my bonnet. But—voilà—it is a memorable day!"

Within the mossy chateau, its great rooms gay with masses of lilacs, tulips and yellow acacia, a small house party had waited luncheon for Edward.

But Mrs. Simpson had been unable to stay inside. During the morning she walked in the garden, alone.

The day started out grey and chilly, but an hour before the duke arrived the sun burst out to show the countryside in all its splendor.

A knot of villagers had gathered outside the gates, with waiting newspaper men, to see the duke.

Wearing sabots, the peasants climbed from bicycles and chatted with the gendarmes. Then they whirled away the time munching chocolate and bread and sipping from flasks of white wine.

A truck loaded with live pigs paused for a moment in the road and the grided driver gazed with mild curiosity at the crowd.

An English woman, on a tour from London, outdid the newspaper photographers in taking pictures of everything in sight.

As the duke's car passed, every English newspaper man removed his hat.

Edward wore a black overcoat, but no hat. He leaned forward, smiling, and waved to the newspaper men.

First in his mind was a romantic rendezvous in this "knight errant and damsel" setting, to discuss plans for the marriage.

His sun-tanned face was a picture of boyish happiness as he left the car at the chateau door and embraced the woman for whom he had waited so long.

Only yesterday, she won her final freedom from her second marriage—to Ernest Aldrich Simpson, London ships' broker. Her marriage to the duke will follow—probably late in May or in June.

With Edward when he reached the chateau was a mysterious steel box, believed to contain jewelry. There was a box of edelweiss, the white flower that grows on the lonely Alpine crags that the duke had climbed in his 22 weeks of self exile; and likewise for Mrs. Simpson—a colorful dirndl, the Austrian peasant woman's dress.

Early Wedding Favored. Members of Edward's entourage, a short time after his arrival, disclosed the duke was in favor of an early announcement of the marriage plans. That announcement, it was indicated, might be forthcoming as soon as Edward and his fiancée have had time to discuss the arrangements.

Edward rose early on the train, donned the same gray suit he wore yesterday and touched off his coat with a new, blue necktie he had bought in Austria.

He breakfasted in his compartment and, over his coffee, perused an English magazine featuring coronation preparations. A member of his party had bought the magazine for him at the first station stop in France.

The duke was smiling broadly when he left the train. Two men quickly escorted him to one of the waiting cars. He delayed departure just long enough to permit photographers to snap him seated in the automobile.

Edward's terror, Snooky, recovered from a train sickness that kept his master from getting very much sleep, rode in the car with the former monarch. The duke had washed and combed the animal on the train before reaching Verneuil.

Townpeople at Depot. The arrival at Verneuil was witnessed by about two scores of the village's 744 inhabitants, who ranged in a semi-circle about the station platform in the few minutes between arrival and departure.

Edward greeted the chauffeur of the car Mrs. Simpson had sent with a hearty handshake. One closed car and a light truck had come from the chateau. The second limousine contained British embassy officials. A light lighter car was protected by police for the duke's adjutant and butler.

Passengers on the Paris-bound train reported they heard the duke left an Austrian detective who left him at the Swiss border: "See you again in about two months."

Edward's stay in France spent the night in an ordinary sleeper.

Wall St. Report

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—Buoyed by the continued flow of cheerful earnings and favorable dividends, stocks stepped off further recovery paces in today's market.

Activity, while comparatively slow, was more pronounced than in the preceding session when the turnover was the smallest in nearly a year.

Heavy industrials took the play from the start and at the best advances of fractions to 3 points were widely distributed. There were a few better upturns. Subsequent profit selling lowered top marks in many instances.

In addition to improvement of business sentiment, buying contingents seemed more assured by the calmer action of foreign markets and the tendency of bonds and the majority of commodities to tilt upward. Transfers were around 850,000 shares.
