

NEW POWER BILL NEEDED FOR DAM ASSERTS MARTIN

Governor Not Surprised by Commission's Opposition to Rate Authority Division — Confusion Seen

WASHINGTON, May 5.—(AP)—The federal power commission advised congress today it wanted either complete control or release from the responsibility for power rates at the Bonneville dam.

The commission expressed disfavor for the two Bonneville measures now pending.

The commission's opinion had been sought by the house rivers and harbors committee on two administrative measures involving the project on the Columbia river between Oregon and Washington. One, by Representative Martin Smith of Hoquiam, Wash., the commission found undesirable in that it divides the responsibility for rate fixing.

SALEM, May 5.—(AP)—Governor Charles H. Martin, who just returned from Washington where he appeared before the rivers and harbors committee on the Bonneville power situation, said today a new bill will have to be drafted by the committee to meet the power situation on the Columbia river.

Commenting upon the report of the federal power commission announced from the national capital today, Governor Martin in a statement to the Associated Press said:

"I am not surprised at the position taken by the power commission (opposing division of rate authority). As I stated before the rivers and harbors committee, there are 35 bills introduced on the Bonneville matter where there never should have been but one. On the rehash great confusion has crept in, some of which is reflected in the opinion of the power commission.

"I have felt for some time that the confusion which has arisen as the result of so many cooks interfering in the broth that the rivers and harbors committee, on which are so many sound and able men, will have to rewrite a bill of its own after hearing the great mass of testimony."

"I have complete confidence that the committee's bill will meet the entire situation satisfactorily."

PULITZER AWARD LINK IN DIVORCE

WAYCROSS, Ga., May 5.—(AP)—A divorce blamed in part on the Pulitzer prize winning novel, "Lamb in His Bosom," today separated its author, Caroline Miller, from her educator husband, Will D. Miller.

The Ware superior court issued the final uncontested decree yesterday.

A cross-tire of petitions and depositions filed before Mrs. Miller was granted her first decree and the custody of the three children disclosed the book widened the marital breach. Said the novelist:

"He (Miller) complained incessantly and became nagging and unbearable" after the book was published and won the prize in 1934.

Said Miller: "He was a faithful and affectionate husband and the couple got along well until his wife got pleasure mad after writing the book."

HALLIBURTON HAS JOURNEYED AFAR

Richard Halliburton, who will lecture on his travels at senior high school auditorium May 18, under auspices of the Active club, has lived the life of an adventurer and a wanderer since he was a boy in his teens.

At 17 he left his home in Memphis, Tenn., and went to New Orleans with dreams of tall ships and far off lands. It wasn't easy for a boy, broke, hungry and inexperienced to obtain work on a ship, but by haunting the levee he finally landed a job on a tramp steamer headed for Europe.

That trip started Halliburton on his wanderings. He returned home, and his parents persuaded him to finish school, but immediately after graduation he set off again to collect material that eventually led to his first book.

Since then he has written four other books that have amazed a critical world with their audacity and strange happenings.

WENDEL RELATES KIDNAP, TORTURE IN PARKER TRIAL

NEWARK, N. J., May 5.—(AP)—H. Wendel took the witness stand over defense objections in the federal court conspiracy trial of Ellis H. Parker and his son, Ellis Jr., today to tell his story of being abducted and forced to confess falsely to the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Wendel, beginning the story of his abduction and "confession" to the Lindbergh kidnaping which delayed for three days the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the crime, said he had known the elder Parker, chief of Burlington county detectives, for many years.

They first discussed the Lindbergh kidnaping on March 12, 1932, Wendel said, when Parker expressed a wish to contact someone in the underworld concerning the case.

Capone Mentioned. Wendel brought the name of Al Capone, Chicago gangster now in Alcatraz prison, into his testimony, saying that Wendel, Parker Senior and the latter's secretary, Mrs. Anna Bading, went to see a relative of a secretary to Capone.

The witness said Parker told him he had direct contact with Washington and assurance that Herbert Hoover, then president, would pardon Capone if he aided in the Lindbergh case.

He quoted Parker as saying he was in line for head of the state police or of a state bureau of investigation and promised Wendel would be an undercover investigator at $5,000 a year.

Tells of Abduction. Wendel then began relating the story of his own abduction and alleged torture.

In front of his New York hotel, he said, a man he later found was Murray Bleefeld, approached him the night of Feb. 14, 1936, and told him Jimmy De Louie, a Trenton detective, wanted to see him "at headquarters."

Martin Schlossman, he said, was driving the car.

Bleefeld, Weiss and Schlossman have pleaded guilty.

Wendel described the ride to Brooklyn from Manhattan and said Weiss told him when they stopped: "If Bruno burns, you burn."

He told of the place he was held and described the instrument of torture which the government alleges was used to force him to confess the Lindbergh kidnaping.

He demanded an explanation, he said, and finally was told: "Somebody in New Jersey put the finger on you."

"I asked who and he said a 'high police power in New Jersey ordered you picked up.'"

He finally was told he was wanted for the Lindbergh kidnaping.

"You can make a lot of money confessing to the Lindbergh kidnaping," Wendel said he was told.

"They kept suggesting," he said, "that I say I kidnaped the Lindbergh baby for the purpose of getting Bruno Hauptmann a new trial."
