

JACKSON COUNTY HEALTH SOCIETY IS 20 YEARS OLD

Mrs. Dunbar, Portland, Voices Need More Coordination at Last Night's Meeting.

Sadie Orr Dunbar of Portland, widely known health authority and executive secretary of the Oregon State tuberculosis association, voiced the necessity for more co-ordination of all public health service units in an address before the 20th anniversary celebration of the Jackson county health association last night.

Mrs. Dunbar, who has been a leading figure in state health programs for the past twenty years, was recently nominated as an unopposed candidate for national presidency of the Federated Women's clubs and will leave Oregon next spring to take up duties in Washington, D. C. for three years.

Stating that health workers set for objectives the saving of lives, the postponement of death and the elevation of physical and mental efficiency, comfort and mental effort, Mrs. Dunbar declared that a concerted effort must be made by both volunteer and official health organizations for nation-wide cooperation as opposed to individual and local efforts.

The speaker pointed out that Jackson county organized the first county association in February, 1917; hired the first public health nurse outside of Portland; had one of the first full-time health units; and in almost every other way has led all counties of the state in a health program and today still stands as probably the best in the state.

"Even though you have a good public health program and have made great strides in the field, Jackson county can't stand alone," Mrs. Dunbar told her audience. "In spite of the good record and achievements of public health work in the United States, community protection needs a nation-wide health program."

Mrs. Dunbar also stressed the need for health education of the general public and that an intelligent, informed and cooperative public is necessary to the accomplishment of health work.

She concluded with a plea to the Jackson county association to continue its efforts and leadership of the entire state in the expansion and development of public health.

Business of the meeting included announcement of new officers, again headed by Miss Mildred Carlton as president. Others are: Mrs. John Fuller of Ashland, vice-president, who conducted last night's session; Mrs. Lewis Ulrich, secretary; and Mrs. J. C. S. Wells, treasurer.

Annual treasurer's report, made by Mrs. Wells, showed that more than $6000 passed through the organization's treasury last year and approximately $6500 was expected to be expended during the next year. Mrs. Robert Hart was named general chairman of the annual Christmas seal sale for next year.

Miss Mildred Carlton, one through whose efforts and increasing interest largely the association has expanded and grown to its present proportions, was unable to be present but sent a summary of the association's twenty years and named leading figures and accomplishments of its development. Mrs. I. E. Schuler read Miss Carlton's message.

The meeting was held in the Jackson county courthouse auditorium and dinner preceded Mrs. Dunbar's address. A large crowd of members and friends were present with representatives from all principal communities in the county.

FIRST FEAST OF LAST MAN'S CLUB

The first annual banquet of the "Last Man's Club" will be held at the Hotel Medford on Saturday evening, May 29, at 7 p. m. The object of the club is to meet once a year and drink a toast to our departed comrades. At the banquet next Saturday night each member will be given a number and assigned a place at the table which will always be his own down through the years, and cannot be filled by another. As the comrades depart this world their places will still be there represented by a vacant chair. The chair bearing the number 13 will be left vacant and will represent all our comrades who have gone before. A bottle of cognac will be dedicated and placed in storage to be opened at the last banquet by the last man, and a toast drunk to all departed comrades. Any ex-service man is eligible and is invited to join. Kindly notify I. D. Canfield, R.F.D. No. 1, Box 439, telephone 14-P-22 if you can be present so that a place will be reserved.
