LARGEST AIRPLANE TO LAND HERE AT AIRPORT TUESDAY

The latest flying craft to ever set down on the Medford airport—a 14-passenger TWA Skyliner—rolled over the mile-long runway yesterday carrying a party of distinguished English and Irish citizens and a crew of three. The huge plane remained at the airport while its passengers lunched.

The ship, powered by twin 750-horsepower Wright-Cyclone motors, was under charter to O. S. Baker of England. Other passengers were Sir William Wheeler, eminent English surgeon, the Hon. Ernest Guinness, manufacturer of the famous Irish "stout," the Marquis of Silgo, Capt. G. Goschen, M. C. Newbold, Mrs. L. S. Piteroy and Mr. Hallam, man-er-vent to the Hon. Ernest Guinness.

Piloting the Skyliner was Capt. T. H. Ashford of Transcontinental Western Airways. K. A. Woolley was first officer, and Miss Ida Staggers was hostess.

Mr. Baker and party chartered the ship in New York City last Friday after arriving in America on the Queen Mary. They were to remain in the plane for 10 days, flying over the northern states and returning to New York City through the south. They left Medford yesterday after a two-hour stop, heading south to Santa Barbara. The plane was chartered strictly for a pleasure trip, Capt. Ashford said.

Inspecting the plane while it was at the airport was Fred Heath, chairman of the military and aviation committee of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce and former chairman of the aviation committee of the city council.

In a talk with K. A. Woolley, first officer, Heath learned that the local airport was one of the finest the plane had encountered so far. Woolley stated that it was entirely adequate for planes of that size, and was a much better field than many larger cities.

Capt. Ashford said the plane was being chartered at $800 a day.

AUTO GUIDES AND CHILD EYE CARE OPTOMETRIST AIM

Orange-yellow highway strips to avert auto accidents and a more scientific gauge of school children's vision are emphasized as pressing needs by Ralph Barstow of New York in a series of lectures in the Hotel Medford today.

Mr. Barstow is director of economics for the optometric extension program conducted by the Graduate Clinic Foundation. He conducted clinics at the Hotel Medford last night, this morning and this afternoon. Optometrists of the southern Oregon zone attended the sessions.

Mr. Barstow said that while many states are adopting orange-yellow backgrounds for highway signs and center strips it has not been so easy to get such strips painted along the highway edges for the guidance of motorists in the face of glaring headlights at night.

"This must come, however, because a heavy percentage of motor accidents occur at night," Mr. Barstow stated.

With a side strip for guidance the motorist can keep safely to the right but when the edge of the highway is ragged and unmarked the driver has the tendency to keep too close to the center with the result that accidents occur, the speaker said. The orange-yellow color has been found to be the most easily seen, he explained.

Mr. Barstow stated that optometrists are also making a sustained effort to procure an annual visual check-up for every driver. He declared that nearly 50 per cent of motor accidents are due to seeing failure.

Optometrists are fighting everywhere for a more thorough check of the vision of school children, Mr. Barstow said. He declared that the system now most generally used is inadequate with the result that children are retarded in school work and are frequently branded as stupid whereas the fault lies with parents and school authorities in not providing a scientific vision check-up.
