Wall St. Report

NEW YORK, June 7.—(AP)—Early rallying efforts appeared in today's stock market but these were later succeeded by a generally lower drift. An afternoon break in grain, cotton and rubber futures took the starch out of most potential share buyers. Despite aiding tendencies exhibited by numerous leaders, including steel, copper and motors, several oils and specialties managed to buck the quiet selling trend for modest advances. Speculative and investment forces could find nothing outstanding in the news to stimulate action either way and the side-lines were crowded with commission house customers waiting for inspiration.

THIRTEEN PERISH STATE'S WEEK-END SORROW HARVEST

Blackest Monday of Year—Water and Automobiles Take Highest Death Toll

(By the Associated Press) Death's week-end harvest of sorrow in Oregon found this Monday the blackest of the year. Thirteen persons are known dead and authorities fear the bodies of two others rest at the muddy bottoms of Marys and Willamette rivers. Shattered automobiles killed six, five persons drowned, one man died beneath a falling timber and another committed suicide. The toll: Automobiles—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dexter of Umatilla, their 21-year-old daughter Kathleen and their 4-year-old son, Ivan, Mrs. Z. U. Leonard of Kent, Sherman county; and Henry Clatt of Portland. Drownings—Wesley Ebert, 19, Forest Grove; Howard Cadwalader, 9, Medford; Morton Olson, Marshfield; Fred Palo, 30, Astoria; Herbert S. Pal, 26, Portland. Missing—Ben Torrey, 17, Red Bluff, Calif., believed lost in the Willamette river near Oregon City; Kenneth Edwards, 8, Corvallis, feared drowned in the Marys river. Robert Reed, 45, a farm laborer was crushed to death beneath a toppling tree near the Salem airport. Alexander Gelling, 50, stabbed himself to death at Portland, said Deputy Coroner C. E. Shea. The Dexter family met a horrible death a mile west of Umatilla. A tire blew out as Dexter tried to avoid an oncoming machine and rolled down a 40-foot embankment. Containers of gasoline and kerosene exploded, burning the trapped victims beyond recognition. The terrific blaze drove off rescuers. Gene Dexter aided the fire fighters, not knowing the smoke and flames hid the bodies of his brother and family. A fishing boat capsized on the Coos river, drowning Olson and throwing his two companions into the stream. A diver recovered the body. Palo stood up in a rowboat in the Nehalem river and fell overboard as he attempted to remove his shirt. He, too, was fishing. A swimming party and picnic ended in tragedy when Ebert dove and struck his head on a rock in Gales creek at Rippling Waters park.

SELECTION OF JURY IN FIELDS CASE UNDERWAY TODAY

James Dunn Heads Cast Rialto Film

"You're In The Army Now," a fast-moving comedy drama starring Wallace Ford had its local premier at the Rialto theatre last night where it opened a three day run to pleased movie-goers. James Dunn and Patricia Ellis, co-starring in "You're In The Army Now," opened as the added feature with "You're In The Army Now." Briefly, the story concerns the high-wide and handsome ventures of a typical New York wise guy who, after a mad Chinatown brawl, finds himself pinned with a murder charge. Thinking fast, he gets possession of the murdered man's papers and passport, makes a quick getaway and lands in London. Here, as Jimmy Dean, he becomes a private in the British Army, falls in love with a beautiful blonde, gets in and out of scrapes and eventually winds up as a national hero. In questioning the prospective jurors Assistant District Attorney George W. Hession indicated the state expected counsel for Fields to rest to a double defense: self defense and the unwritten law. District Attorney Frank J. Newman is in charge of the prosecution. Fields is represented by Newbury & Newbury, appointed by the court.

DRAMATIC PICTURE WITH PAUL MUNI ON CRATERIAN PROGRAM

Two of the screen's foremost dramatic stars, a sensational young newcomer in his bid for stardom, and a vibrantly realistic story of the French air forces in the World War are seen in "The Woman I Love," which opened at the New Craterian theatre yesterday. Woven together with exceptional skill, this screen version of Joseph Kessel's great French novel, "L'Equipage," permits Paul Muni and Miriam Hopkins to do some of their finest characterization. The essentials of the tale are simple. Hayward, a young observer just commissioned, is taking a last fling in Paris before going off to the front, and he meets—and falls head over heels in love with—the alluring Miss Hopkins. He leaves her and joins his squadron, where he sympathizes with the morose Muni, a capable but highly disliked pilot, and teams with him as a flying mate. Months later he goes back to Paris on leave, and after a few deliciously happy days with Miss Hopkins, goes to look up Muni's wife. To his horror he learns that Miss Hopkins is Muni's wife, and despite her pleas that love is a bigger thing than either
