Welcome to the Lions

THERE was a time when civic luncheon clubs competed largely in the quality of their chicken croquettes, singing programs, and humdinger proclivities. They were essentially social organizations, with few definite aims other than to get together once a week, and have a good time.

BUT a great change has taken place in the last decade. There are still a large number of such organizations, but practically all of them, have some serious purpose, in the direction of constructive betterment, in the communities in which they live.

MEDFORD has the good fortune this year of being the convention city for the Lions of Oregon. Their state gathering will open here this Sunday and continue through Monday and Tuesday, during which period, needless to say, this community will dispense its best brand of welcome, and its warmest hospitality.

This city has particular reason to be grateful to the Lions, for thanks to the local organization's vision and leadership, the movement for a public park on the crest of Roxy Anne was inaugurated, and the high light of the convention will be the formal dedication of Prescott Park, and the successful termination of a public spirited effort, which places in Medford's suburban area, one of the outstanding scenic attractions in the entire state.

The Lions were assisted by the Chamber of Commerce, city officials, the U. S. government and the state. Actual development work was made a part of CWA and SERA activities. But eight years ago it was the local LIONS CLUB that acquired 200 acres of the present park area, deeded it to the city, following the approval of the site, by the City Planning Commission, and from this nucleus the present extensive Prescott Park of 1700 acres, resulted, which will be not only a fitting memorial to a courageous and self sacrificing public servant, but a scenic and recreational asset to this section of the state, for all time to come.

SO all praise to the local Lions for a good job, well done! They originated the idea, and in the face of many obstacles and discouragements, carried it through to complete success. Medford would give a warm and hearty welcome to a state convention of such an organization as Lions International at any time, of course. But under the conditions which prevail, this welcome is tremendously strengthened and stimulated by a deep and genuine sense of gratitude, for the great public service to this community, this organization has performed.

Don't Forget to Vote

THE streets of Medford, belong to the people. If a majority of the people don't want their streets repaired at the present time, and so express themselves at the polls, that's OK, as far as this paper is concerned.

We would regard such action as extremely unfortunate, from the standpoint of the public welfare, and saving our investment of a million dollars in paving.

But "vox populi, vox dei." We live in a democracy, and the majority rule. What the majority wish, the majority should have.

But if a majority of the people of Medford DO want their streets repaired, but through indifference, carelessness or some other cause, fail to so express themselves at the polls tomorrow, then that will NOT be OK as far as this paper is concerned, and would be an outcome which all right thinking people should deplore.

For that would be a defeat of the popular will, a failure of democratic government, for which only the people themselves would be to blame.

SO on the eve of the election, as this paper's final word, we urge all good citizens tomorrow, TO GO TO THE POLLS, AND VOTE. How they vote is important, but not so important as that they do vote,—that they do their duty as citizens, and exercise their franchise.

Let's make this election, an expression of what a majority of the people of this community desire, not what some minority wishes, and secures only because the majority fails to go to the polls.

Bob Ripley recent revealed why he clung to single blessedness, in a magazine for bachelors. It is a simple explanation: One could not expect a woman to go gallivanting off to all far corners of the earth on a moment's notice in quest of the outlandish and odd. Yet, as a matter of fact, Rip is extremely home conscious.

He has always lived in apartments where he could express domestic cheer. Aside from his penthouse atop the Athletic club, he has a 20-room mansion on a vast estate on Blon Island, off Mamaroneck, in Long Island Sound. But Ripley is not averse to woman's claims. Almost always in public he is squiring with much gallantry something especially slick and saucy.

I have often thought one of Ripley's most interesting "Believe It Or Not" concerned the depth of his own cartoon life. In the beginning he

Personal Health Service

By William Brady, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address: Dr. William Brady, 245 El Camino, Beverly Hills, Calif.

MUSCLES, ARTERIES AND NERVES

Examination of the clinical records of 300 or more men aged, on the average, 52 years, in each of the following occupations or callings, viz: farmers, laborers, clerks, lawyers, bankers, physicians (in all more than 1800 men) showed that 33 of the doctors, 18 of the bankers, 14 of the lawyers, 14 of the clerks, 8 of the laborers and 8 of the farmers had coronary sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries involving the coronary vessels which supply the heart muscle itself. This degeneration is likely to manifest itself in angina pectoris or in coronary thrombosis.

The physician who reported this study suggested that what is a crisis for the banker or business man is more or less routine for the physician. By that he implied that the responsibilities and anxieties of the physician attending obstetric cases, broken legs, heart disease cases, infantile paralysis, scarlet fever, diphtheria, appendicitis pneumonia, cosmetic tragedies and other critical conditions are as intense as that of the banker when there is a run on his bank or the business man when a strike impends. Besides, the physician has to deal with a great deal of nervous energy by the time he has finished school for his schooling is long and intensive compared with that of the average banker or business man.

I hope this will put some of your bankers and business men in your place. You generally contrive to be in conference when a mere doctor comes hat in hand to apply for a little extension of credit, yet as the statistics show, after all you're just a lot of lowbrows.

The unphilosophical layman may take that idea of used up nervous energy seriously. Probably a good many dumb doctors, especially surgeons and brass specialists, think it is a pretty sound notion too. I wonder what they'd think if one were to sound off in similar fashion about exhaustion of a great deal of nervous energy, lung energy or skin energy? Imposing conversation aside, and speaking in terms of physiology, a person can use up skin energy or liver energy as readily as he can use up nervous energy. There is no ground for the notion that energy, strength, vigor or power is produced by or used by the nerves or the brain. Physiology recognizes no such thing as nervous energy. There is no such state as nervous exhaustion, apart from ordinary exhaustion. The only energy, power, strength or vigor concerned in human metabolism, so far as physiologists have determined, is that liberated by the oxidation or combustion of food-fuel to produce heat or muscular work.

The trouble with the doctor who has just finished his medical training and with many doctors who have attained success in practice is, not that they have used up too much energy but that they have failed to use up the energy liberated by emotions. In short they have neglected to get a sufficient daily ration of muscular work, play or exercise to blow off steam, and the cardiovascular system not the nervous system, breaks down under the abuse.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Preparing for Maternity. Would it be injurious for a prospective mother to get a permanent wave? Is it advisable for her to wear a maternity corset? (Mrs. F. S.) Answer—As a rule, no. Both questions should be answered for her by her physician, whom she should consult as soon as she believes she is to become a mother and visit at regular intervals for advice.

Peppers. Why don't you give the lowly pepper a break as a rich source of vitamin C? (J. C.) Answer—Green peppers, dabbled in, are perhaps the richest known source of vitamin C, ounce for ounce. But I don't like peppers. I don't like mashed potatoes or grapefruit either, and it is no use trying to make me say nice things about 'em.

Tooth Decay in Children. Please tell me what causes my children's teeth to decay so fast. They try to make them brush their teeth regularly, yet... (Mrs. O. W. B.) Answer—They do not get sufficient direct sunshine or naked skin. They do not get sufficient calcium and phosphorus (of which milk and cheese are the best sources). They need a daily ration of vitamin D to supplement their diet. Pleasantest and most economical vitamin D would be a half dozen irradiated yeast tablets daily, chewed along with any food or drink. British Medical Research Council found that control of tooth decay in children requires several times as much vitamin D as the amount considered necessary to prevent rickets.

NEW YORK Day by Day

by O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 17.—From a box office standpoint at least, the beautiful Clara Boothe, carried off the season's playwrighting honors in her play so hilariously packed with feminine meows and called "The Women."

All the well-sharpened critical javelins so fiercely hurled fell blunted. There are many versed expertly in dramatics who see in her opera a bitter realism that the critics entirely missed. She was shooting higher than was noticed in the first hurried criticisms. So she could just now, if so minded, titter just a bit cynically behind the faded fan.

But those who know Miss Boothe say she bears no grievance. The public liked her play and paid handsomely to see it. In many ways she has become one of the most fortunate ladies in the New York scene. And all in a year. Before that she was known chiefly as a contributor to Vanity Fair.

During the past year she not only turned in a play that keeps a waiting line at the box-office, but married the spectacular weekly magazine maker, Henry Luce, who in a few years has amassed one of the largest publishing fortunes out of Time, Fortune and Life.

at the moment enough ideas to carry him for 100 years. And has just scratched the surface.

It is rather interesting that the most convulsive laughter over the Sunday "funnies" comes from the usually placid Chinese children in Chinatown. Every Sabbath before Chinatown stirs from its sluggish sleep the children are out on the curb with their comic sections spread before them and almost hysterical with glee. Circulation men say there is no response to such humor just like it. And oddly enough, Japanese children are not at all interested. The Chinese children apply the nicknames of the various strip characters to their playmates.

Homer Crox is a local boy who has made good in a big way with the residents of his home town, Maryville, Mo. The citizens have erected just outside the village the largest sign in the world (4 by 20 feet) in honor of a living author. It reads: "Stop in Maryville, home of Homer Crox, world famous author of 'West of the Water Tower' and 'They Had to See Paris.'" Paducah, Ky., erected one of the largest hotels for a city of its size and named it the Irvin Cobb. Sauk Center, Wisconsin, is to have a public highway named for its literary celebrity, Sinclair Lewis. Most authors receive such honors only after they have long moldered in their graves.

They were talking, a group of lawyers, about confused witnesses, at the Coffee House club. And John Golden told this: "Now, sir," said the counsel to the witness, "did you or did you not, on the date in question, or at any time previous or subsequently, say or or even intimate to the defendant or anyone else, whether friend or mere acquaintance, or in fact a stranger, that the statement imputed to you, whether just or unjust, and denied by the plaintiff, was a moment or otherwise? Answer—did you or did you not?" "Did I or did I not what?" answered the witness weakly.
