

SEN. GLASS SEES BANKRUPTCY NEAR FOR GOVERNMENT

Extravagant Congress Pushing Country Toward Ruin Declares Ex-Treasurer in Debate On Relief Bill

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Senate administration forces, ignoring economy pleas of their own leaders, rejected today an amendment to the relief bill designed to put more of the cost on local communities.

The amendment of the $1,500,000,000 measure would have required states and local communities, where able, to contribute at least 40 percent of the cost of the WPA projects.

Just before the test, administration forces won a tactical victory by rejecting a modification of the amendment proposed by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Senator Glass (D., Va.) punctuated heated Senate debate on the $1,500,000,000 relief bill today with the assertion that "Congress is precipitating the country into actual bankruptcy by its extravagance."

The former treasury secretary, back in the senate after weeks of absence, lined up with economy advocates in favor of an amendment by Senator Robinson (D., Ark.) to require local communities, where able, to supply 25 percent of the cost of WPA work projects.

Another advocate of the Robinson amendment, Senator Borah (R., Idaho), said increasing governmental spending was "a creeping paralysis" which had reached near the "heart" of the nation.

Tax Increase Told He said in 1850 taxes took only one cent of every dollar of income, but in 1936, took 35 percent.

"There must be a reduction," he exclaimed. He spoke after Senator McKeellar (D., Tenn.) criticized the Robinson amendment as "unfair, unjust and impossible of fulfillment," and asserted he was "not willing to balance the budget at the expense of the needy."

Robinson has started political tongues wagging by his revolt on the pending bill.

The veteran Arkansas rarely has differed publicly with President Roosevelt since he became "boss" of the senate majority in March, 1933.

Colleagues surprised So colleagues watched him with surprise today as he fought with the Republicans and some Democrats to write into the relief bill a curb on the administration spending.

Robinson's amendment would require local governments, where able, to put up at least 25 percent of the cost of local projects.

Senator Barkley (D., Ky.), leading the administration's battle for an unrestricted bill, contended the amendment would be rejected. Both sides hoped for a final vote before nightfall.

Friends forecast that Robinson would be back in the fold when the present issue was settled. They said Robinson's attitude on the relief question reflected a deep-seated personal conviction.

SANTANDER NEXT GOAL OF REBELS IN BILBAO AREA

Capture of Last Basque Stronghold Deemed Necessary to Overcome Menace Bilbao Water Supply

By the Associated Press Thousands of Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's troops streamed through captured Bilbao today to the hills west of the city in the start of a campaign against Santander, 45 miles away, last stronghold of the Basques.

Footbridges were thrown across the Nervion river to speed the movement. Insurgent officers considered subjecting Santander province necessary to overcome the menace of water famine in Bilbao. Water conduits were broken from territory still held by government forces.

Roads to Bilbao were jammed with insurgent trucks bringing food to the city's 300,000 inhabitants. Five food ships were reported en route to the city from San Sebastian, insurgent-held port.

Basque government troops were reported entrench three miles west of Bilbao for a new stand against the invaders.

At Madrid, a huge government mine exploded in suburban University City, where insurgent troops are entrenched. The government commander reported the explosion split in half the University City municipal hospital, insurgent stronghold.

On the international scene, Germany was expected to ask Britain, France and Italy to join her in demanding from the Valencia government an apology for reported attempts to torpedo the cruiser Leipzig. Representatives of the powers met in London today.

PRESERVATION OF DEMOCRACY MAIN PROBLEM—HUGHES

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 21.—(AP)—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes today asserted the question facing society "is no longer one of the establishing democratic institutions but of preserving them."

In a prepared address before the annual alumni meeting of Brown university, the chief justice of the United States, an alumnus of the class of 1881, asserted:

"The economic dislocations following the great war have produced conditions, national and international, which vex the imagination and confound the judgment. We still proclaim the old ideals of liberty but we cannot voice them without anxiety in our hearts."

"The question is no longer one of triumphing over sectional discords and unifying the nation, but whether a united people putting forth its great strength for national ends, will leave appropriate scope for individual freedom."

"The question is not one of the adequate power of government, designed to keep clear the highways of honest endeavor, but how that power shall be used."

"Safe as we may still be in the present, what of the look ahead?" he asked.

"Are our democratic impulses growing weaker, and under the pressure of economic forces and insidious teachings of an alien philosophy, will our democracy be able to survive?"

Warning "put no confidence in mere forms or in institutional arrangements however astutely contrived in the interest of liberty," the chief justice asserted "the security of our democratic institutions is not in existing constitutional provisions or framework of government but in the dominant sentiment which maintains them."

WILL DISMANTLE SOVIET AIRPLANE FOR RETURN TRIP

Flew to Eugene Flying steadily but their course picked up only at infrequent intervals after they left Moscow behind, the Russians arrived over the Pacific northwest before dawn Sunday. Heading straight down the coast, they first wandered about in the miserable flying weather which greeted them, and flew 125 miles south of here to Eugene, Oregon.

With the weather getting steadily worse, they banked around and headed northward until they sighted the Larracks airport and decided to get back to earth.

Kozmetaky, a University of Washington student taking reserve officers training at the barracks, and his tent mates, Frank Allen and Kenneth Kirtley, University of Oregon students saw the single-motored ship alighting and instantly recognized it for the Russian ship.

Storms Try Nerve The men, despite the long hours, did not appear exhausted but stumbled slightly as they regained their land legs. In a subsequent radio broadcast at which Ambassador Trotsky acted as interpreter, paraphrasing the fliers' remarks, Cherkaloff revealed that the most trying portions of the flight came in stormy weather at the Bering sea, Franz Josef Land, Prince Patrick Island and near the north pole.

The pilot traced the course as up the Kola Kola peninsula, between Franz Josef Land and the northeast island, thence swinging out over the trackless Arctic wastes and across the pole, southward over Prince Patrick Island, the Great Bear lake east of the Yukon and down west of Port Simpson to Chihogot on the Cross Straits. From there the course lay south inside of Queen Charlotte Island, over Vancouver Island to Victoria and down Washington's beautiful Olympic peninsula.

But for the weather, the pilot said he could have made San Francisco, having enough gasoline left out of the original load of 2,000 gallons to fly 750 miles.

Cognac Scarce The fliers subsisted for the most part on tea and lemon juice but they fore into General Marshall's bacon and eggs with the keenness of long-starved appetites. During the meal, they asked for tea but there was none. They asked for cognac and there was none. The general offered them some whiskey and they grimaced at the first sip and declined it. A search of Vancouver ensued in which underlies finally turned up the much-sought cognac.

Meantime, reporters and a mob of citizens which finally grew so thick that traffic for miles around the barracks was stalled, besieged the po-gates of the port. Earlier, before the general had learned of the unexpected landing, the fliers posed before their plane for photographers, wearing the great, thick-furred parkas by which they fought off the Arctic cold.

Bewhiskered, their bodies grimy and undressed at the general's house and were temporarily outfitted with uniforms, although the commanding officer was hard put to it to find a pair of No. 10 shoes for one of them. Later in the day, after they had slept a Portland department store added to their welcome by giving them complete outfits of street clothes.

Ambassador Arrives During the afternoon, the ambassador arrived from San Francisco and shortly afterward the airman awakened to receive a hearty welcome, read a telegram of congratulations from President Roosevelt, talk with Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, who complimented them on their achievement and also conversed long distance with their families in distant Moscow.

Cherkaloff's first request was a shy remark in Russian to Kozmetaky that he would like a glass of water. He gulped it down.

Balbukoff and Bellakoff fell asleep almost instantly after their breakfast but Cherkaloff, nervously stayed awake and traced on a map the course of the flight before finally relaxing sufficiently to sleep.

Rambling Glacier Speeds Movement In Warm Weather

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, June 21.—(AP)—Alaska's rambling Black Rapids glacier, its movement speeded by hot weather, pushed to the edge of the Big Delta river today while three lakes formed on the surface of the big ice mass.

Travelers who viewed the glacier from the Richardson highway said it is now less than a mile from the Black Rapids roadhouse, situated across the river.

Although Pilot E. E. Parmenter reported photographs showed the glacier moved 400 feet in two days, others said it has since slowed down and no alarm was expressed.
