BANDON OPERATOR RECEIVES MEDAL

The state of Oregon, represented by N. G. Wallace, public utilities commissioner, and the telephone industry of the Pacific northwest, paid high honor Thursday night to Miss Evelyn Manciet, the Bandon, Oregon telephone chief operator, who stuck to her switchboard when the southern Oregon coast town was swept by fire last fall, according to word received Saturday by E. B. Hammond, manager for the telephone company here.

The occasion was the presentation of the Theodore N. Vail medal for "noteworthy public service," to Miss Manciet at a dinner in Bandon sponsored by the Bandon Chamber of Commerce.

Presentation of the medal, one of only two awarded on the Pacific coast for 1936, was made by Commissioner Wallace. A cash award also was presented to the Bandon chief operator by Commissioner Wallace, on behalf of her employers, the West Coast Telephone company.

In making the presentation Commissioner Wallace paid tribute to the unseen army of telephone workers in America—nearly half a million men and women—whose code is "the message must go through."
