Picnic Features Family Reunion

During the visits here of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Chilberg of Seattle and Mrs. L. M. Chilberg of Los Angeles, members of the family gathered for a reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Chilberg arrived last week from the north and Mrs. L. M. Chilberg has been here for several days. They have been guests of Medford relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Scow and Capt. and Mrs. O. L. Overmyer.

The visitors and their Medford hosts arranged a family picnic at Jackson Hot Springs yesterday afternoon. The northern guests left last evening to return to their home. Mrs. L. M. Chilberg plains to remain here during the summer.

Mrs. Chilberg is an aunt of Mrs. Scow, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Overmyer and the Seattle Chilbergs are cousins.

Ashland Extends Golf Invitation

Women of the Rogue Valley Golf club will be entertained by the Ashland group Wednesday, having received an invitation to spend the day on the Ashland course.

The Medford players are to leave the city at 7:30 a. m., it was announced, as tournament playing will begin in the morning. Transportation arrangements are being made by Mrs. P. G. Bunch, president, and those desiring transportation are requested to call her.

The Ashland hostesses will arrange luncheon.

The local women habitually gather on Wednesdays of each week.

Two Return From North

Arriving home yesterday from the north were Mrs. Katherine Huntress and Miss Ann Purucker, who have been among Medford residents spending part of the early summer away.

Mrs. Huntress left about three weeks ago for Portland, where she has since been the guest of relatives and friends. Miss Purucker has been in Portland for the past two weeks.

The two returned together.

John Days Are Medford Guests

Being greeted by Medford friends are Mr. and Mrs. John Day, who, with their infant son, are spending part of the summer here.

They are being entertained by Judge and Mrs. Earl B. Day, parents of Mr. Day, and at Hillcrest orchards, country home of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald H. Parsons, parents of Mrs. Day.

Mrs. Day was formerly Miss Mary Parsons.

Summer Taking Residents Away

Outdoor activities continue to highlight the summer season for Medford residents as hot weather causes mountains and streams to increase in attraction.

Summer homes along Rogue river are almost constantly occupied by owners or guests and each week-end finds many driving to lakes and resorts. Among those spending this month vacationing at river cabins is Mrs. I. E. Schuler.

Travel is also the subject of much interest, many residents choosing this season for trips and others entertaining travelers here. Expected to return home this week are Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Goldsberry, who are among most traveled Medfordites this year, having journeyed around the world.

Picnic Marks 16th Birthday

Members of the Degree of Honor juvenile club gathered Saturday afternoon for a picnic hike in honor of the 16th birthday of Ernest Smith.

The group met first for a short business session at the H. G. Wilson home, later hiking to picnic grounds. The honor guest received a gift and ceremonies were observed in view of his graduation into the adult organization.

Special guests of the club were Louise Russell, Patty Haney, Nora Lee Putman, Donald Bessey, Norman Vance, Lois Weidman, Margaret Sullivan and Val Vee Vandergrift. Game and special awards went to George Denman, Louise Russell and Norman Vance.

Next regular session is scheduled for August 7.

Session Set for Tomorrow Night

All officers and committee chairmen of the Medford Business and Professional Women's club will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. M. M. Snider, 16 North Orange street.

The session is called for the purpose of completing plans for a picnic to be held Tuesday evening, June 20, at the Jackson Hot Springs.

All members of the executive committee are urged to be present.

Club Luncheon Is Set for Wednesday

Members of the Mistletoe club will be entertained at dessert-luncheon set for 1:30 o'clock Wednesday instead of Thursday as previously announced.

Mrs. Irene Shirley will be hostess for the event at her home, 243 Beatty street.

Assisting the hostess in arrangements are Mrs. Marjorie Pearson, Mrs. May Reinking and Miss Eileen Pearson.

COWARD VOLUME, VIVID BIOGRAPHY LIBRARY FAVORITE

Celebrated Dramatist's Life Story Proving Popular — Sea of Grass and Suns Go Down Also in Demand

Autobiographies nowadays are written when the authors are still young and virile and not, as used to be the case, when they are old and senile. Perhaps that is why they have vigor and a keen perception not yet dulled by decadence, a frankness that is refreshing and a realistic viewpoint not yet softened by the mellowing influence of old age.

Whatever their shortcomings, the autobiographies that have been pouring from youthful pens are dynamic. Such a book is Present Indicative which tells the story of Noel Coward's life even though the author hasn't lived long yet. Coward is not yet 40 but even as years go he had attained international fame as playwright, author, composer and librettist.

Present Indicative, which is proving exceedingly popular in Medford public library, is a candid biography. It tells of Coward's rise from poverty, of his brief exposure to formal schooling, of his early jobs as a boy actor. It gives frank analyses of the numerous celebrities who pass through its pages.

Sprightly Written

Like some of Coward's plays, Present Indicative is at times shallow but never is it dull. It is a sprightly written bok, always fresh and vivid.

Another library book that has been considerably in demand is Be Glad You're Nenrotic, by Dr. Louis E. Bisch. It is a volume that should be especially consoling for persons who do not fit into a mold, who are not "average."

Genius comes from the neurotics, Dr. Bisch says. "Normal persons," he declares, "are invariably without imagination. In the extreme they are stupid. They are frequently widely esteemed, grow rich but never creative."

The book is an interesting research into human behavior. Uncluttered with scientific verbiage, it is a very readable volume.

Mining Rush Recalled

"A library volume possessed of a quaint charm is Suns Go Down, by Flannery Lewis. The book centers about the life of the author's grandmother who, though a New Englander of rigid upbringing, married impulsively and set out with her husband for the Comstock Lode when the mining boom attracted hordes to the Nevada fields. The grandmother immediately attained a certain distinction by being the only woman in the mining town who was not a prostitute.

Although she never liked the mushroom city with its bawdy life, she refused to leave when the mining boom collapsed and has continued to lead a solitary life in the ghost town. Her shrewd observations are recorded by the author, who manages to depict quite vividly the life on the Comstock Lode when life was raw and ragged. The style is quiet and dignified yet, paradoxically enough, strong and forceful.

In the fiction field, Conrad Richter's The Sea of Grass is much in demand at the library. Essentially a tender love story, it depicts the southwest of pioneer days and recalls a life now known only to fading memories.

gled around his ankles. Thus, free movement in the water was seriously impeded.

Triple Tragedy Feared.

Meantime Mrs. Jones tried to get into the water to assist her husband and sister. She was kept from the water, however, by her young son who, realizing she could not swim, finally persuaded her to stay on the bank. It was believed that his action averted a triple tragedy.

Charles then ran up the road toward the Copco station and met Mr. Ditsworth coming down. Quickly ascertaining what was happening, Mr. Ditsworth rushed to the scene.

It was too late, however, for by then the victims had been in the water 18 to 20 minutes. Mr. Ditsworth pulled them from the pool. He quickly applied first aid but could work on only one at a time.

Meantime Mr. Ditsworth dispatched Mrs. Jones in her car for William Hunter who lives four miles away on Elk creek road. When Mr. Hunter arrived he assisted in trying to revive the victims. For two hours efforts were made to resuscitate them.

Seeing that resuscitation was hopeless, Mr. Ditsworth telephoned for Coroner Frank Perl. Dr. Mallory and members of the victims' families. Deputy Coroner Herb Brown brought the bodies to the Perl mortuary.

High School Janitor.

Mr. Jones was employed for the past two years as janitor of the Medford senior high school. He is survived by his wife, Mary, his son, Charles, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Jones of Medford, and three brothers, Harold of Grants Pass and Leon and Jesse of Medford.

Miss Eccleston was a student in Lakeview high school. She is survived by her father, Charles Eccleston of Lakeview, five sisters, Mrs. Harold Vanator and Mrs. James Young of Lakeview, Mrs. George Vermillion of Davis Creek, Calif., and Mrs. B. R. Finch and Mrs. Jones of Medford, and two brothers, Earl and Cecil of Lakeview.

A double funeral service will be held in the Perl chapel at 10:30 Wednesday morning, with the Rev. Joseph Knots, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church officiating. Interment will take place in Siskiyou Memorial park.

News Behind The News

for conspiracy against the United States government.)

A great hue and cry has been raised against Governor Winship by one element of natives. Another group blames Washington. One talks about the repression of civil liberties (a charge reiterated by Arthur Garfield Hays, who headed an investigation commission of the civil liberties union). Another begs for a stronger hand.

Governor Winship, who is also a general, is called too militaristic by political elements other than the nationalists. The businessmen, and their colleagues in the United States who deal with them, less interested in politics than profits, would like a stronger hand. They would not only swallow a general, but would be glad of a whole army. They sigh, audibly, for the good old days before 1934, when the war department was in charge.

Of course, sending the army down there to run things would hardly be pleasing to our other good neighbors. As a gesture of amenity, it would rival taking a pole-cat to a cocktail party.

Dollars and democracy!

Just another hot weather problem for your old Uncle in Washington.

The biggest show in Washington is still running to standing room only —the court fight in the senate.

It's exciting, the senate chamber's air-cooled, and it isn't a bad place to spend your vacation.

But the real show is going on behind the scenes.

It combines a display of the perfect coordination of a team on the flying trapeze and the back-to-the-wall determination of the death battalion.

The field marshal is Senator Wheeler of Montana. The reserves are headed by Senator Burke of Nebraska. The silent man of strategy is Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri.

They have their act rehearsed to a hair, and they say it's going to win.

You can't miss Senator Wheeler. He's on his feet whenever there's a chance. You may miss Burke, but he is there. Being there, in fact, is his job. He hasn't been off the floor a minute since the fight started. When the session runs through lunch, he goes without any.

Clark may not be in sight of the galleries, either. But wherever he is, he is within instant call of Burke or Wheeler.

He's the parliamentarian, naturally. He was parliamentarian of the house of representatives when his father was speaker.

Incidentally, when President Pro Tempore Key Pittman sprang his "surprise" in the court fight, which was announced as death to any hopes for filibuster by the bill's opponents, it wasn't any surprise to Clark. An ancient rule had been dug up prohibiting any senator from talking more than twice on the subject in the same legislative day. The Missourian and his colleagues knew it was coming. They have, it is said, the antidote ready to apply when needed.

All of this, however, doesn't scare the administration a bit.

The president, as indicated earlier in this column, believes that a filibuster will turn the country against the opposing senators. If they insist on staging a marathon debate, he will simply betake himself to his yacht or his homestead and let them talk themselves to death.

The way senator Clark plans to get around the new appropriation of the old rule to stop the filibuster by allowing each senator to talk but twice on any subject is simple, but effective. New amendments to the bill will be introduced by the opposition senators as desired. An amendment is a new subject and so the talk can go on forever as long as amendments hold out.

This picture gives you a good idea of how a champion does the crawl. Lenore's leg drive, pivoted at the hips, is in perfect rhythm with her vigorous arm stroke. The result is smooth, streamlined speed—record-breaking speed!

From starting gun to finish line, Lenore's under tension. As pictured at right, even her breathing must be timed to a split second.

Even after an 880-yard race, Lenore comes up smiling. In choosing her cigarette, she pays particular attention to mildness. "I've found I can smoke Camels as often as I like, thanks to their mildness," she says.

Smoking Camels seems to put me in just the right mood at mealtimes and helps me to have a feeling of well-being afterward. Camels set me right!" Because Camels are so mild—and made from such costly tobaccos—you can smoke them steadily, without jangled nerves. At mealtimes, Camels encourage a free flow of digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—and lend a helping hand to good digestion.
