DEWEY BYRNE DEATH DUE TO NEGLIGENCE

KLAMATH FALLS, July 28.—(AP) A coroner's jury Tuesday brought in a verdict asserting that negligence on the part of Ralph Peyton was responsible for the accident on the Lakeview highway Saturday in which Mildred Hicks, 14, and Dewey Byrne, 40, were fatally injured.

The inquest was held in the Hicks death case, the jury stating that it believed Peyton was driving recklessly and at an excessive speed when the car he was operating collided with one driven by Mrs. Grace Hicks, Mildred's mother.

Involuntary manslaughter charges were filed against Peyton Monday.

MARK OF FASHION FINALLY ACCORDED CORN ON THE COB

American Dish at Last Receives Reluctant Okay—Cooking Hints Are Given by Bureau of Economics

(By Bureau of Home Economics)

Sweet corn—bushel baskets of it—fresh from the field, is now beginning to be seen in the markets. It is rapidly displacing its humbler predecessor, green field corn, usually called "roasting ears."

From mid-July until fall the real sweet corn is available. By the first of August it will be at its height, and around mid-August it will likely be at its cheapest.

This summers sweet corn promises well. Though the U. S. department of agriculture economists gather no figures on this crop, they are quite ready to say: "Conditions have been favorable for corn in general—naturally they are favorable for sweet corn."

Dietetically, sweet corn's claim to a place on American tables is based chiefly upon its carbohydrate-phosphorus content. Very young green corn is about 15 percent carbohydrate—which places it in the same class as grapes and apples. But corn's carbohydrate content increases rapidly as it matures, so that kernels of medium maturity come in the 20 to 25 percent carbohydrate list of fruits and vegetables.

Rich In Phosphorus

Green sweet corn is rich in phosphorus and carries some vitamin C, about half that of tomatoes, weight for weight.

As to preparing sweet corn, your 100 percent American will invariably call for it on the cob. And Dame Fashion has at last, though somewhat reluctantly, conferred a measure of gentility upon the "dish." Silver skewers can now be bought to thrust into the ends of the cob and thus save fingers from buttery contamination.

Whether or not it is to be served thus (au naturelle) it is most flavorous and tender so cooked. Simmer the corn ears in salted water. Don't boil it rapidly, don't use a large quanity of water and don't overcook.

When the corn is done, you may cut the kernels from the cob, add seasoning and, if you like, some cream. If you are serving it on the cob, it will look more attractive and stay hot longer if you place it on the table covered with a napkin, as you would hot rolls.

Time Is Important

As most housewives know, the time lapse between picking and cooking is one of the most important factors affecting palatability. From the field directly into the pot is ideal. A few hours between picking and cooking is tolerable. But let a whole day elapse and family enthusiasm over the corn will be noticeably lukewarm. Few other foods deteriorate so rapidly after picking.

Sweet corn is delicious used as a filler for tomato halves and then baked.

If the sweet corn surplus is to be canned it should be done in the pressure cooker. Hot water bath canning involves too much danger of food poisoning. The housewife who has no pressure cooker would be wise to dry her surplus. Most vegetables are not so palatable dried as canned, but corn properly treated is a delicious product, considered by some as superior to the canned.
