

HAND OF SLAYER IS KEY TO CRIME UNDER NEW TEST

MILWAUKEE (UP)—Milwaukee gunmen are being trapped in a chemist's laboratory.

White-coated city chemists working quietly among their test tubes, beakers and flasks have become the gun-carrying criminal's worst enemies.

Under the leadership of Russell W. Cunliffe, director of the bureau of laboratories the chemists have developed a test which they believe is virtually error-proof in connecting a gun with the person who fired it.

The chemical experts have improved the method by linking a gunman and his gun through paraffin tests by recording the exact distribution of powder marks left by a gun on the shooter's hands.

When police detain a suspect in a shooting case they take him immediately to the detective bureau for a paraffin mold of his hand. The mold then is turned over to Cunliffe who tests it for traces of powder.

"Powder contains a nitrate," Cunliffe explained. "When a gun is fired microscopic particles bore into the skin of the hand holding the weapon."

Traces of powder are picked up by the mold, the chemist said. When a nitrate testing solution is applied to the mold blue spots appear if the nitrate is present.

While the chemist applies the nitrate tester to the mold, others note and record the number, size and distribution of the blue particles.

On a diagram of the hand the testers record where each particle of powder is found.

"Then by tracing the distribution of the powder marks made in controlled shooting it is possible to connect a gun with the powder marks found on the hand," Cunliffe said.

"In one case, a husband was shot while alone with his wife. The question was whether he had shot himself or whether she had killed him. A paraffin test revealed 56 particles of powder on the dead man's hand. I fired the gun and 58 particles of powder were distributed on my hand in the same manner as the dead man's," Cunliffe said, explaining that this convinced him that the man had fired the gun.

Cunliffe said the test has been used in 53 cases here since it was discovered in his laboratory in 1933.

At present his assistants are working on a process that would enable them to produce a permanent picture of the mold. As now used the mold becomes invaluable after a single test.

PRESIDENT VETOES CHEMICAL CORPS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—(AP)—President Roosevelt said in a veto message to the senate late Wednesday that he was doing everything in his power to "discourage the use of gases and other chemicals in any war between nations."

He returned to the senate a bill to change the name of the chemical warfare service to the "chemical corps." He said he hoped the time would come when the chemical warfare service could be abolished entirely.

"To dignify this service by calling it the 'chemical corps' is, in my judgment, contrary to a sound public policy," he wrote.

The president added: "While, unfortunately, the defensive necessities of the United States call for study of the use of chemicals in warfare, I do not see the wisdom of the United States to do anything to aggrandize or make permanent any special bureau of the army or the navy engaged in these studies."

G. Pass District Must Pay Bonds

PORTLAND, Aug. 6—(AP)—Federal Judge James Alger Fee signed an order today instructing the Grants Pass Irrigation district to pay James Brennan $7000 for seven bonds at 6 percent interest from June 30, 1931.

James G. Wilson, counsel for the bondholder, said the order requires the district to budget the sum by the second Tuesday in September. The bond, he said, will lay an assessment to take care of the obligation and certify it to county authorities for collection.

and fresh fruits. And, needless to say, a plate of crunchy doughnut sticks served with a glass of iced tea or coffee on a hot afternoon will be all you'll need for a successful, neighborly "get-together." Grated lemon rind and nut meats help to make these doughnut sticks refreshingly different and you will find them a real pleasure to make. There's a real delight in lifting these slim, beautifully browned "goodies" out of the thrift cooker kettle; and there's delight, too, in watching how zealously your family or guests bite into them. For after all, the proof of doughnut sticks, like the proof of the pudding, is in the eating.

Women Rulers to Put Little Village on Map

FRIENDLY, W. Va.—(UP)—The women are in the driver's seat in this little town of 175 souls because the "men didn't do anything but play checkers and gossip."

It was this alleged lack of activity on the part of the men folk that permitted the women to take over the town government—the mayor, council, recorder, all the town's officers are women.

"The women were swept into office by a 3-to-1 vote—a victory that would not have been possible without support from the men, because there are as many men as women in the town."

The only office still held by a man is that of town marshal and the women expect to take over that position within a short time, because Marshal J. Mack Doty is 84 years old.

"He'll serve temporarily," said Mayor Mrs. Stella Reddy, "but we will probably appoint a woman to succeed him later."

Mrs. William Williamson, white-haired and motherly, who was elected to the council, said: "We are going to show the men we can run the town. We are going to clean it up and we will have the prettiest and nicest little town in West Virginia."

Mrs. Elgie Rustemeyer, noted for her accommodating nature, has started her third term as town recorder. "I tell you," she said, "the men were pretty angry about all women being elected—but they will get over it and they will find it is the best thing for the town."

But there is at least one man who is decidedly in favor of the change. He is K. D. Deak, good-natured operator of the town's gasoline station and restaurant.

"This ought to be pretty friendly on the part of the men," he said. "It's the first time in West Virginia's history that all women have been elected."

Two members of the town council are women—Mrs. Clara Williamson and Mrs. Ella Williamson. Their maiden name was Williamson and their married names were Williamson.

All the new officers have children, too, and all are widows, except Mrs. Rustemeyer, Mrs. Clara Williamson and Mrs. Gertrude May.

Caught, indicted and convicted within less than 24 hours, Thompson late yesterday was rushed to Stillwater state prison to begin serving a life sentence.

His arrest followed a 12-day manhunt.
