First regular gathering of the chapter following the summer vacation period will be a joint picnic with the Grants Pass group September 17 in the Grants Pass park.

Andrew Mellon Succumbs After Months Illness

only daughter in 1926. "He was very weak."

Mellon made no last statement or request as he passed away.

Plan Pittsburgh Funeral

While men who had been associated with Mellon in his many and varied activities paid him tribute, plans were made for funeral services in Pittsburgh, where he was born and spent his life with the exception of his years in Washington and London.

The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at the East Liberty Presbyterian church, a magnificent edifice which Mellon and his brother, the late R. B. Mellon, made possible by their benefactions. The body will be taken to Pittsburgh late today.

Mellon was fabulously wealthy but the extent of his personal fortune was in the realm of speculation when he died. The only official estimate made public was $208,000,000, given by Mellon's secretary during hearing of the banker's income tax appeal in 1926. Friends said, however, they believed the combined fortune of the financier and his two children would amount to approximately $500,000,000.

Many Philanthropies

Like John D. Rockefeller, Sr. and other contemporaries, Mellon's personal fortune had been partly dissipated by the lavishness of his philanthropies.

Mellon's vast enterprises reached around the earth and gave employment to thousands. Banking, oil and aluminum were his principal interests and their corporate names were the Mellon National bank of Pittsburgh, one of the nation's largest, the Gulf Oil company, and the Aluminum company of America, dominant in its field.

Only a few weeks before his last illness he visited President Roosevelt and made final arrangements for his last great public benefaction—establishment of a national gallery of art in the national capital with his $50,000,000 art collection, one of the finest extant, as the nucleus.

One of the last great statesmen-financiers of the nation, Andrew William Mellon successfully assumed the limelight and was little known to his countrymen until he became secretary of the treasury under President Warren G. Harding in 1921.

He remained on the job until 1932

Chapter Planning Homecoming Session

Arrangements are being completed for the annual homecoming session of Adalee chapter, O. E. S.

The gathering has been set for next Thursday evening in Jacksonville. All members and friends are extended a cordial invitation when he retired to become ambassador to Great Britain.

Target For Attacks

Fellow Republicans hailed him as "the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton," but he was the target of sharp attack by the Democrats who unsuccessfully attempted to drive him from office in 1924.

He was proud of his record as a cabinet officer and his party cited the reduction in the public debt from $23,737,000,000 in 1921 to $17,820,000,000 during his service. He met the criticism that the public debt had been reduced too rapidly with the statement that "far from hurting the country, it has been a great benefit to all those who needed capital."

Mellon retired to private life in 1933 when he resigned as ambassador to Great Britain, and afterwards seldom appeared in public. A man of few words who left speechmaking to others, his last public speech was at the dedication of the new home of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research in Pittsburgh May 6.

provide more ventilation during a heat spell, and reached the outside stairway by dropping through a vent over the jail matron's quarters. They were assisting the jailer and when he was called to another part of the jail made their getaway.

News of Schroeder's arrest in the New Jersey city is the first word received on either since their flight.

Schroeder, on parole from San Quentin prison and wanted in Los Angeles and other California cities, passed spurious checks in this city aggregating about $200. Following his arrest he entered a plea of guilty.

Hicks, with a police record in this section, sold the stolen cowboy equipment in Grants Pass for $25 and was arrested here.

Though Schroeder put a continent between him and the county jail, Hicks is regarded by the authorities as less of a traveler, and is still believed to be on the Pacific coast. All his life he has followed occupations such as sheepherding and logging that took him to out-of-the-way places.

Mrs. Roberts landed a fish last Saturday morning that weighed 7 1/2 pounds and measured 24 inches long and six inches through, it was reported. Previously, Mrs. Hugh L. Soovell of 335 South Riverside avenue held the unofficial women's record of the season with a 6 1/2-pound rainbow trout at Diamond lake.

Mrs. Roberts landed her whopper in the morning with a Troutoreno having a white body and a red head. She was spending the week end at the lake with her husband, W. Dee Roberts, in their summer cottage.
