Behind Washington Headlines

By H. R. Baukhage. Copyright 1937, by The North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

(Continued from Page One) financing; the new high peak in the public debt, the low interest rates, and, finally, the effort to obtain a wider distribution of the government securities.

Whatever nervousness the financial world feels over the war situation, the Washington government has been remarkably calm on that score. But the same can't be said for the attitude of the politically-minded toward the domestic situation.

They remember that the "H. C. of L." as high cost of living was abhorred then, due to the Wilson regime. Some feel that it was the economic situation quite as much as the political, with the League of Nations thrown in, that turned the Democrats out.

Is the situation repeating itself? With retail foodstuff prices soaring and insistent demands for an increase in wages following, the old vicious spiral has started. Although wholesale commodity prices, on the whole, have had a setback, particularly in the cases of wheat and cotton, the cost of the finished products in most lines is increasing and the old bugaboo, "consumer resistance," has already appeared on the scene.

Already the administration is being charged with allowing speculation in the necessities of life and permitting trade practices which give the consumer the little end of the deal.

In the midst of it all, congress has hung a price-fixing rider on the District of Columbia tax bill. This measure, which prevents price cutting of trademarked goods, has been urged by manufacturers for 30 years, but never got to first base before. The effect of the law may be modified to some degree by new private brands which will undersell well-known articles.

But there is no dodging the H. C. of L. threat. Even the farmers, with the highest income since 1929, face the possibility of increased costs that will more than eat up their long-deterred profits.

The composite statistical picture painted by the federal reserve board and the departments of labor and commerce in their month-end reports, which have just been released, is one of a seasonal lull in industry and trade. This, together with lessened activity in textile mills, has served to hold down the volume of industrial output, with aggregate for the month of August holding at about the same rate as in July, which was 114 per cent of the 1923-25 normal.

Operations at steel plants have declined slightly this month, but preliminary indications are that coal consumption has slumped sharply in recent weeks. Automobile production is currently experiencing the seasonal let-down, preparatory to the introduction of new models. While automobile manufacturers have placed orders to hold down the volume of models, the aggregate of such commitments is reported to be relatively small.

Electric power production has been reaching new high levels each week, while petroleum refinery operations are also being maintained at peak levels. The level of wholesale commodity prices has been reduced by a sharp drop in prices on agricultural products, but live stock and meats showed a further increase.

The department of agriculture forecasts a cotton crop, on the basis of August 1 conditions, of 15,593,000 bales, representing an increase of 3,200,000 bales over last season and necessitating a government subsidy-loan program to stabilize prices of the southern staple.

Official estimates indicate that other major crops will be considerably larger than last season and about equal to the average for 1928-'32. Preliminary estimates by officials of Secretary Wallace's department indicate that cash farm income, including government benefit payments, will total $9,000,000,000 for the calendar year 1937, an increase of 14 per cent over 1936.

In the following chart each index figure is based on 1923-25 averages as 100, except prices, which are based on the 1926 level. Most of the figures are adjusted for seasonal variations and are official, except those of August, which are this column's estimate:

Table with columns: Year, Industrial Production, Retail Prices, Wholesale Prices, Farm Income, etc. Data for 1929, 1936, 1937, and August (Est.).
