Poor Dove of Peace

To the Editor:

(Note: This is the writer's personal opinion, in collaboration with Senator Jobiottes, U.S.A. (United States for Applesauce.) The characters are figments of the imagination. A living resemblance would be merely a coincidence.)

Peace on earth? We pipe you over the side, with twenty-one guns. The symbol of peace and pacifists is the dove. The poor thing, instead of soaring with an olive branch in it's bill, now swings into action with a bunch of cannon crackers.

Being a pacifist is a safe and sane pastime, according to that great chronicle "The Mustard Pot of Penance." Paralleling the vegetable kingdom, pacifists are many shapes, shades and conflicting colors. Some are rooty, other paunchy. In addition, there are honorable, canned heat, top soil, sub marginal and blood thirsty pacificts. Further along the road to the desolate ether we contact the sentimental, biological and duck and drake types. Pacifists are deliriously happy shaking hands with each other . . . in a mud puddle.

The 20th century pacifist is no shrinking violet. The danger of solitude, having the ears tinted red, or suffering endless castigation from the mud daubers league is frightfully sub normal. Men have quit working today, because they are too peaceable to fight for a living. Beer parlors, street corners and spots along the railroad tracks are hot houses for flea bitten pacifists, joyfully sliding down the slopes of nothingness into a peaceful coma . . . orchids flowering in a field of skunk cabbage.

The modernistic trend of pasifictic thought, which is an old notion with a new ensemble, seems to slant toward rendering an opponent's bulk into a substance closely resembling tomatoe pulp, or shooting the thing full of holes. This sensible idea is guaranteed to purify the soul from every degenerative influence fogging the image of peace. The central idea, peace, is thus beheld twinkling like a speck of gold, in a barrel of lamp black . . . unadorned peace . . . somewhat cockeyed, stands naked as a fire hydrant.

The honorable pacifists are to be found among the survivors of our wars. When these strident trumpeters of peace are "Gone With the Wind" the only rational course for pacifists to pursue, will be to resurrect another army committed to war; in order to recruit another army consecrated to peace.

A contradiction? Hardly; there's no accounting for our tastes in food, or ideas. Some people prefer catsup with hot cakes, others pour syrup over mashed potatoes . . . we think like we eat, and eat like we think.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

HONGKONG (China) is ravaged by a typhoon, and as these words are written the death list is headed toward the thousand mark. A cholera epidemic, dread pest of the unsanitary Orient, is feared.

IN ORDINARY times this would be a terrible catastrophe. By comparison with man-made disaster at Shanghai, Hongkong's scourge of nature seems trifling.

AT SHANGHAI, a British ambassador, while engaged on an official diplomatic mission, was attacked, machine-gunned and severely wounded by Japanese aviators.

Britain (wisely, beyond all doubts) did a lot of talking but NO SHOOTING.

AN UNIDENTIFIED (but suspected to be Italian) submarine attacks and sinks a British merchant ship and attacks but fails to sink a British destroyer in the Mediterranean.

British warships (with the French navy co-operating in principle) are given immediate orders to SHOOT TO SINK if such attacks are repeated and they get sight of the attacker.

WHY the difference?

The answer is plain. The Shanghai shooting is an isolated incident, annoying, of course, to British dignity, but NOT THREATENING British existence.

Torpedoing British ships in the Mediterranean, if permitted to go on, might threaten the existence of the British empire.

AN AMERICAN passenger liner approaching Shanghai is attacked by Chinese planes, and we promptly (and VERY WISELY) order other American liners to STAY AWAY and take no risks.

But just let the Chinese, or ANYBODY ELSE, attack the Panama canal and we'll start shooting to kill.

NATIONS that don't want to fight (and this includes practically all the big nations that are sitting reasonably pretty as is) can pass off insults to their dignity with nothing more than sharply worded diplomatic messages. But just let somebody THREATEN THEIR EXISTENCE and they reach for their guns without further ado.

Self defense, among nations as among individuals, is held to justify shooting to kill.

baseball and football as well as ply his trade, so he was right at home.

At last Mr. Studebaker was made assistant superintendent of schools in Des Moines and then he settled down to a career of superintending, modern style, which isn't over by any means, but which was interrupted once before when the government called him to help out in an emergency.

The first time was during the war, when he came to Washington as assistant director of the Red Cross and started something that hasn't stopped—building furniture and kits and equipment for the Red Cross huts, refugee establishments and hospitals, and also building good will in the form of correspondence between school children of America and those in foreign lands. He had twelve million children working for him.

His war work over, Mr. Studebaker went back to Des Moines until 1934, when he was granted a leave of absence to come to Washington as commissioner of Education.
