Chicago Wheat

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Nervous bulges in prices late today carried September and October deliveries of corn up respectively 2 1/2 and 4 cents a bushel. The bulges, which were not fully maintained, were due to buying by traders who were short of supplies to meet uncompleted contracts, and were influenced by indications that the market was threatened with a "natural corner."

At the close, corn varied from 1/4 lower to 2 1/2 cents higher compared with yesterday's finish. Sept. 1.05 1/2, Oct. 73 1/2, Dec. 63 1/2.

The brisk selling drive soon lost force and a gradual rise set in aided by short covering, brokers said.
