F. R. WILL SURVEY FOUR YEARS WORK ON MONSTER DAM

Executive to Be Shown Progress at Bonneville Since 1934 Visit—Ready Soon to Furnish Power

PORTLAND, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Four years of engineering genius will unfold themselves for President Roosevelt next week when he views for the second time the great dam he authorized at Bonneville on the Columbia river.

United States army engineers will guide the executive over the same ground he inspected in August, 1934, at the site of the $45,000,000 power and navigation project he approved the year before. The scene is different, however, for the project will grind out power by the end of the year.

Scene Transformed
Three years ago men and machinery were gouging into the basaltic foundation for the power house, navigation locks and spillway. Great piles and rock marred the spectacular beauty of the Columbia river gorge. A construction city of frame shacks had been hastily erected.

Now there are beautifully designed homes on the government reservation. The raw, jagged cut through the rocks has been transformed into a passageway for ships. A massive powerhouse spans the channel between the Oregon shore and Bradford's island. Water flows where the president saw the river bed exposed in 1934. Elaborate fishways carry the migrating salmon upstream to their native spawning grounds. The pillars of the spillway stand like soldiers across the channel.

Roads Relocated
Engineers have relocated railways and highways. Revestment work is underway to protect river communities from floods.

Giant gates control the river's flow so that powerful turbines may rotate the electric generators and send out power to the Pacific Northwest.

Under tentative plans, the president will reach Bonneville September 28 at 8 a. m. (P.S.T.), leaving at 9 a. m. for Hood River. Then he will motor over the Mt. Hood loop highway to Timberline lodge, tucked away on the queenly peak of the Cascade range. After dedicating the lodge he will drive to Portland and continue to Seattle.

SAN GABRIEL CORPS REGAINS HONORS IN LEGION COMPETITION

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Forty-eight gayly complexioned caballeros from California who marched and drilled with West Point precision and played musical masterpieces with trumpet, cymbal and drum, once again are the champion corps of the American Legion.

Pride of San Gabriel Post No. 442, the corps, which lost the drum and bugle corps championship last year to the Commonwealth Edison Corps of Chicago, achieved a comeback in competition with 56 other crack outfits.

In costumes reminiscent of old Spain—dark trousers, white satin blouse, flat crowned, wide brimmed hats and red sashes—the Californians gained a rating of 96.825 from the 11 judges to win first prize of $1,250.

Two eastern corps—the orange-coated East Orange, N. J., Post No. 73 and the blue uniformed outfit from the Henry H. Houston II (second) Post No. 3 from Germantown, Pa., tied for second prize of $700. They scored 96.13 each. The Harvey Seeds Post of Miami, Fla., finished fourth with 95.40. Third prize was $350 and $200 went to the fourth place winner.

KLAMATH NIMRODS SHOOT HUGE BEAR

KLAMATH FALLS, Sept. 22.—(AP)—When Clifford Scroggins and Everett Kidler went hunting along Deadhorse creek on Gearhart mountain yesterday, they were looking only for deer, but a 800-pound black bear was their prize—a prize they agreed they would just as soon forego in the future.

Scroggins saw the bear first and shot once, wounding it in the throat. The maddened animal then charged at Kidler, digging up the ground and tearing bark off trees in its path. Kidler said he was scared but decided to shoot anyway, and the bullet from his rifle dropped the bear in its tracks.

The men had to cut the carcass in two in order to carry it into camp. A forest service man said it was the largest bear he had seen killed in the Gearhart country.

Prosperity in Waste
BERKELEY, Cal.—(UP)—This city has found a new means for gauging the growth and development of a municipality. Its increased revenue from garbage last year was 8.64 per cent.

Special Jokers' Fine
HOLLISTER, Cal.—(UP)—Judge Fred Voll has fixed at $15 the legal rate for practical jokers who think it is funny to dump the salt and pepper into the sugar bowl in restaurants.
