

IL DUCE RECEIVES FESTIVE WELCOME IN BERLIN PARADE

Mighty Essen Armament Factories Visited by Dictator—Army Maneuvers Staged for His Benefit

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—(UP)—Premier Mussolini of Italy arrived in this capital of Nazidom this afternoon, to begin a lavish procession through the streets to the cheers of great crowds.

The guest of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, Il Duce already had seen the might of Germany's army in annual maneuvers and visited today the factories at Essen, whence come German armaments.

His tour through festive streets of Berlin led to the presidential palace, for nine years the official home of the late President Von Hindenburg, reserved as Il Duce's residence for the three days he will spend in Berlin.

Perfect autumn weather brightened the Italian chieftain's arrival, and a setting sun glided the station as a flag-waving, cheering multitude pressed about the railway station.

At Essen, the mighty metal works of the Krupp cannon factory roared a war-like welcome to Mussolini.

Just before he and Hitler strode through the clamor of Germany's "heart of steel," the center of her rearmament, a responsible Italian official said that both German and Italian troops would fight in Spain to the end.

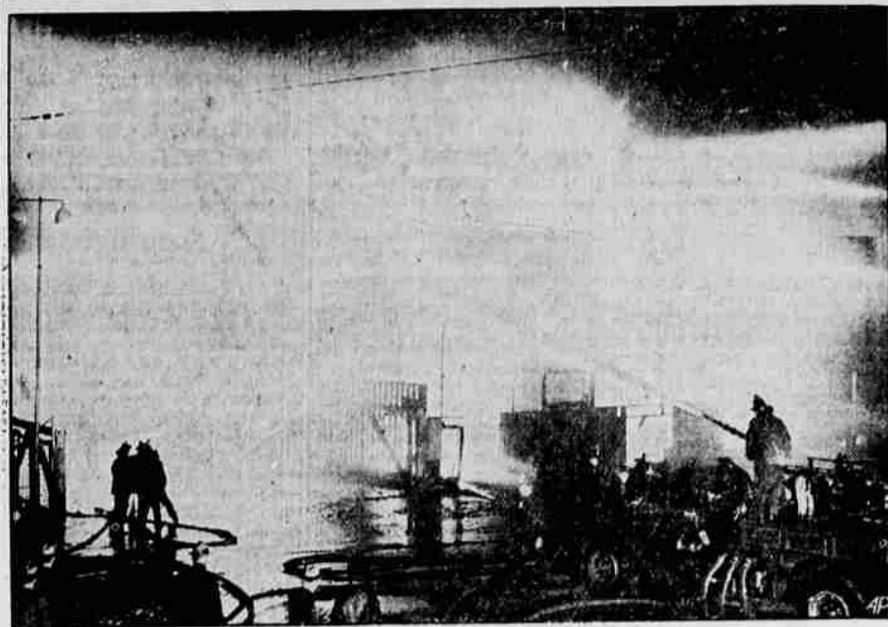

His declaration was made in answer to Spanish government offers to withdraw all foreign troops from their forces if the insurgents would withdraw theirs.

Italy's policy, he declared, will remain as Mussolini has described it.

Fire Razes Standard Oil Storage

San Francisco firemen fought a spectacular five-alarm blaze at the Standard Oil company's storage tanks and plant there for more than five hours before bringing it under control. The loss was estimated by officials at more than $100,000. Firemen are shown fighting the night blaze.

that Italian troops will continue to fight for insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco until Franco wins.

Plant in Operation

He said he presumed the German attitude was the same.

Smoky furnaces belched flame, colossal hammers beat a pandemonium on white hot steel as Hitler and his Italian guest entered the immense plant.

Most of the vast factory—which covers about as much area as the rest of Essen—was kept running so the two leaders could see Germany's greatest arma center in full swing.

Der Fuehrer and Il Duce saw giant cranes swing 16-inch guns from foundry to forge like toothpicks, raw steel transformed into the armored plates and turrets of battleships, new and powerful land and sea guns take shape.

Their guide was Dr. Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, head of the house of Krupp, who told Mussolini how this great foundry grew from Friedrich Krupp's little blacksmith shop 125 years ago.

Their surprise visit to the Reich's greatest armaments center again turned the attention of the traveling heads of state to war.

Yesterday der Fuehrer and Il Duce stood on a hill near Mecklenburg watching a seven-mile panorama of combined army and navy maneuvers, remilitarized Germany's greatest since the World War.

BOMBARDMENT OF NON-COMBATANTS CITED BY DR. KOO

own sentiments are in order to reinforce the universal demand of a civilized world for the immediate abandonment of such practices."

The Chinese statesman called attention to the protest by Secretary of State Cordell Hull as an example of the world-wide reaction to the Japanese policy.

The Chinese government, Dr. Koo said, believes there are certain measures the league could recommend to the governments of member states.

Asks Aid for China "We particularly ask . . . that the utmost encouragement and assistance be extended to China, the victim of flagrant oppression," petitioned Dr. Koo.

The Chinese people, he said, pin their faith on the league to "rescue them from slaughter." He envisioned a picture of destruction that later may come to other cities of the world if Japan's air bombardments are unchallenged.

Members of the committee applauded at the finish of Dr. Koo's appeal. It was the second voice to be raised by an embattled nation at Geneva today.

Earlier, Julio Alvarez Del Vayo, Spanish government delegate, demanded that the league "call the bluff" of Germany and Italy—"this two-headed monster which appears to want to declare war on all Europe."

CROWD OF 10,000 GREET'S PRESIDENT ON STOP IN BOISE

other aside "that sounds like Senator Pope and Borah too."

Borah, who earlier had had a brief train conference with the president, but declined to say what they talked about, was the first speaker at the capitol.

"This is a great day," he said, "and we all join in welcoming to our state our great president."

Welcomed by Borah First Republican to join in greeting the president on his western trip, Borah said he was delighted that so many people were present and added:

"I heartily and sincerely welcome the president to our state."

Governor Barzilla W. Clark and Mayor J. F. Edelson also spoke briefly. Pope introduced the president.

The president said he would never forget his tour around Boise in the warm sunlight and when he looks back on it later he would think chiefly of two things—the beautiful tree-lined streets and "your children."

"And I take it, being a Roosevelt, that you will follow a sound Rooseveltian creed and that the population is not going to die out," he said as the crowd laughed.

There was something about children and trees, he said, that made him think about "permanency."

One of the chief obligations of a president was to think about the future, about the years when he leaves office as well as those when he is in the Whitehouse, he commented.

"We have been a wasteful nation," he said, adding not only natural resources but "very often human resources" are wasted.

That was one reason why a president ought to travel—to find out how things are going and how people are getting along, he declared.

In his travels, he added, he was not thinking of petty problems, of quarrels and disputes of the moment, but was trying to think of the bigger things of life.

After the speech, the president went back to his train for lunch, after which he planned another motor trip to see other federal projects at Nampa, Caldwell, Wilder and Parma Idaho.

The tour was then to take in Nyssa, Ore., and thence on to Ontario, Ore., where he was to reboard his train for the overnight trip to Bonneville dam, near Portland, Ore.

advancing crowd, but was rescued by police.

The same democracy which prompted Schmidt to ask his opponent to talk was in evidence in what became a veritable debate between Schmidt and Joe Casey, teamster organizer.

While the estimated 8000 men, listened, Schmidt and Casey argued the status of teamster pickets, who massed to protest IIA jurisdiction over warehousemen.

All ships in the harbor were being worked today.

Picket lines dwindled shortly after 8 a. m., when teamster pickets were ordered back to work at points other than the docks, after a two-day holiday.

into Shanghai on Japanese boats declared the Japanese had established customs depots in the Japanese occupied Yangtzeop and Hongkew areas of the international settlement and were collecting duty on all imports.

Foreign Business Periled

American business men asserted that if the Japanese retain control of the settlement and Chinese waterfront territory through establishment of a puppet government after hostilities are over, they will be able to divert American goods destined for inland distribution to their own area.

Such a condition, the Americans said, would eventually mean the end of many American and foreign owned businesses in the settlement while it would form the nucleus for the creation of a large Japanese controlled metropolis along the Shanghai waterfront.

A Chinese spokesman declared that they had broken the Japanese attack on the northwestern flank of the battle line in the Lüshung and Lotien sector and recaptured three additional villages.

As the Japanese reinforcements moved into the area to stop the Chinese push, Japanese army officers announced flatly they planned a major drive along the entire front. They said that when it gets underway "it will be like a flood breaking down the dikes."

BIG DRAG-LINE SHOVEL DIGGS STERLING TRENCH

A big, diesel drag-line shovel is engaged in digging a trench 500 feet long, four feet wide, and 30 feet deep at Sterling, nine miles from Jacksonville in the Applegate, according to Frank P. Dutton, on whose land the operation is in progress.

Dutton said the shovel was being used to reach water for irrigation purposes, and that he expected the operation to produce a 10-inch pipe of water when completed. He stated the shovel moved three and a half feet every 35 seconds.
