SOVIET CONQUEST OF ARCTIC BY AIR SHOWN BY RECORD

MOSCOW.—(UP)—Figures showing for the first time the amazing extent of Soviet Russia's conquest of the Arctic by air have just been released by the official news agency, Tass.

They show, irrespective of the spectacular north pole flights, that length of regular airlines in the extreme north now reaches 8994 miles.

During the year ended in August, Soviet airplanes, it was stated, have traveled more than 1,676,000 miles in the Arctic; transported 8999 passengers, carried 111 tons of mail and 730 tons of cargo.

The Tass statement asserts the Arctic planes assist in the building of new industrial centers in the extreme north, bringing provisions, building materials, equipment, etc. Thus, for instance, planes brought 800 tons of building materials and equipment for the construction of the Arctic polarisearch station.

Ice conditions, the knowledge of which is so extremely important for ships plying the Arctic seas, are reconnoitered from the air. Airplanes also serve the whaling and sealing trade. Before airplanes were used for locating these animals the average catch of seals and whales was 30,000 to 35,000 heads. Now it has increased to 150,000.

Aviation is especially important for the people wintering in the remote Arctic stations, in a number of cases representing the only means of communication for them.

Such important every-day work, conducted by the Soviet aviation under the difficult Arctic conditions, has resulted in the accumulation of abundant experience and has brought up a flying personnel which secured the success of the expedition to the north pole of the transpolar flights of Chkalov and Gromov.

Dilly The Duck Is Qualified Coiffeur

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—Dilly the duck was a contented mud splasher, but apparently no higher ambition in life, until he took up hairdressing.

Now hairdressing has become an obsession with him and he neglects everything, except his domestic responsibilities, to comb the hair of his young master, Dick Lee, nine, of El Paso.

Dilly can put as attractive a part through Dick's hair as the boy's mother. He uses his beak.

Dilly was an "Easter" duck presented to Dick by a friend. The two were inseparable companions until Dick's father purchased Donna as a "girl friend" for Dilly.
