Hoping to inaugurate something new in the way of contests, the feature staff of the Medford High School Crater magazine will hold a contest to find the average high school girl during the latter part of October.

Mimeographed questionnaires will be distributed at the next Girls' League meeting asking for the necessary information. The questions ask not only for statistics concerning personal appearance, but they also attempt to gind out something about the life and habits of the average high school girl. The answers to these questions will be tabzulated, averaged, and the winner will receive a large picture of herself in the Crater, together with a feature story.

About 400 blanks are being prepared for distribution.
