NAME COMMITTEE TO CONFER WITH AVIATION GROUP

Committee was appointed today formally to greet the group of aviation officials coming here Saturday to inspect the Medford municipal airport and survey future needs for expansion to keep pace with airline developments. The committee is representative of the city council, Jackson County Chamber of Commerce and Medford chapter of the National Aeronautics association. It is composed of Fred M. Weatherford, city superintendent, Fred Heath, Jr., chairman of the chamber's aviation committee, and Max Pearce, past president of the local National Aeronautics association chapter, with A. H. The committee will make all arrangements for meeting the visitors, showing them about the airport and presenting them with data on development requirements. Because they are making a strictly business tour and because their time is limited, the public has requested that no public luncheon, dinner, meeting or entertainment be planned for them. The committee expects to be informed Wednesday or Thursday of the visiting group will be headed by Corrington Gill, assistant WPA administrator in Washington; Gill Robinson, manager of the Newark, N. J., airport and president of the National Association of State Aviation Officials; Col. Sumner Smith, WPA aeronautical engineer; Howard Rough, assistant director of the bureau of air commerce; A. B. "They are on a strictly business tour and so the visit here must be confined solely to business matters. Our committee will show what has been done at the airport and present facts and figures on what is standard to keep the airport up to standard."

John Barrymore In Rialto Mystery Hit

John Barrymore's classic nose takes on impressive, if not colossal proportions for his role of Colonel Nielson, the suave get-your-man police commissioner from Scotland Yard. In the fast-paced new rhyme-riddled comedy-mystery film, "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back," which opened last night at the Rialto theatre. John Howard plays the role of Captain Drummond. His extra-ordinary sleuthing powers, in this particular case, are stimulated by the fear of losing his fiancée, lovely Louise Campbell, kidnapped at the outset by a dangerous lady, out of revenge herself upon Captain Drummond for his success in bringing her crook lover to the gallows. To prove that her villainy is not without imagination, the lady sets clues for the chase in the form of rhymed riddles. "It Can't Last Forever," starring Ralph Bellamy, Betty Furness, Raymond and Robert Armstrong plays as the companion feature. The special bill stays at the Rialto through Tuesday.

According to "Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering," an automobile tire, costing $60 in 1910 produced 3,000 miles, while in 1935 a tire costing $18 is good for 20,000 miles.

WAVE OF SELLING SENDS STOCKS TO NEW LOW LEVELS

Prominent Issues Lose $10 Or More in Destructive Dumping—Brokers Unable Fathom Heavy Slide.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Looses ranging to $10 or more a share in prominent issues were recorded today after one of the most destructive selling waves of the steep decline in the stock market since mid-August.

Prices were battered down steadily until the final gong rang after leading shares, led by steel, had resumed the descent to new low ground around midday. At one time near the close Chrysler was off more than $11 a share, Eastman Kodak about $9, United States Steel around $7 and Bethlehem Steel nearly $5.

Steel shares felt the full impact of ironed selling as the American Iron & Steel Institute announced operations of the industry this week had dropped to 58.2 percent of capacity compared with 63.8 last week, 76.1 a month ago and 74.2 a year ago. Trading was so heavy on the downside the stock exchange ticker lagged eight minutes behind transactions on the floor when the curtain rang down for the day.

Most sectors of the trading front felt the influence of the new slant in share prices. Second-grade bonds were hard hit and many broke widely, notably among rail issues. Most speculative commodities gave way with stocks, especially rubber, hides and cotton. Major commodity prices on the average were about as low as in the final half of 1936 and early months of this year. Aside from the sharp setback in steel production, which accentuated fears of a further business setback in wake of the drastic decline in speculative markets the last few weeks, brokers could see little tangible in the day's news to explain so wide a slide in share prices. Traders approximated 3,277,000 shares, the largest volume since March 3, last.

Craterian theater with the opening of the long-awaited, much-anticipated Frank Capra production, "Lost Horizon." Capacity crowds for both afternoon and evening performances not only battered all previous boxoffice records but witnessed one of the most amazing entertainments the screen has ever offered.

For a long time we have been hearing about "Lost Horizon" and as reports of its successes in roadshow engagements kept drifting back, anticipation grew keener. Now, at the Craterian's regular prices, this anticipation has, if anything, brought an even keener delight in seeing this much discussed filmation of the famous Hilton novel on the screen. For here is a motion picture that deserves the use of such often maligned adjectives as daring, bold, enterprising, spectacular, imaginative, stimulating, masterly, triumphant.

It is all that. Daring because it has departed from the accepted standards of film entertainment; bold because it necessitated not only a departure from the usual but because it is obvious that the $2,000,000 which was put into the production could very easily have been a lost cause; enterprising because Frank Capra, the aid of Robert Riskin, made a complete turnaround after such modern stories as his last, "Mr. Deeds," spectacular which reaches a new high in sheer thrill of beauty and action and excitement; masterly and triumphant because, in spite of all the caustic criticisms that confronted its makers, they nevertheless held faith and finally emerged with the goal that had set out to conquer.

The time of the story is the present. Revolution breaks out in China. A little group of civilized people—a consul, fossil collector, the consul's brother, a fugitive from the law, and a woman girl—board a plane. Believing they are being flown to safety, they discover they are flying into an interior that lies beyond any horizon. The plane crashes and natives find the victims. Then, for them, physical and mental time stops. They are led into Sangri-La, a seeming Garden of Eden where there is no sin and peace and contentment reign. There, their lives are started anew.

A fine cast of players, admirably headed by Ronald Colman, apparently were imbued with the spirit so evident in the production and all turn in fine performance.
