SALVATION ARMY HEAD CITES NEED OF CHEST FUNDS

A brief resume of the relief activities of the Salvation Army in the past year was given today by Adjutant G. R. Durham, director of the Community Chest campaign, in explaining what chest funds are used for.

His report showed that during the past 12 months the Salvation Army supplied 2,397 meals to the hungry, provided 2,012 beds for transient individuals and gave away 371 garments and 125 pairs of shoes, assisting during this period a total of 4,229 individuals.

In addition to all this, the report showed, the Army provided 109 needy families with baskets of food at Christmas time last year and gave an evening of entertainment and new presents to 342 children at their annual Christmas tree.

It was pointed out that numerous services rendered to the needy do not show up in this report—such items as transportation, rent paid, dental and medical assistance, recreational activities for young people, picnics and outings for poor mothers and children being unlisted.

"When it is remembered," said the adjutant, "that we are but one of seven agencies which participated in the Community Chest last year, I think that any reasonable person would agree that chest agencies can give, and do give, a good account of their stewardship."

Asked whether the Salvation Army assists all persons who apply to the agency, the adjutant stated that the organization finds it necessary to reject many applications for assistance for several reasons. The Army, in common with all welfare organizations, finds it necessary to weed out from its applicants the professional charity seeker, he said. In the case of families applying for assistance for the first time, an investigation is made to determine whether there is actual need, and in many cases it is found to be non-existent, he added.

Last week, according to the adjutant, a report came to the organization that a certain family was in dire need of assistance. Upon investigation, however, it was found that the family was well cared for and neither desired nor needed any assistance from the agency, he asserted.

Adjutant Durham stated that it is at times necessary, however, to turn away needy cases due to the lack of funds to meet their need. The Army has a limited amount of money to spend each month and when that is gone, applications must be refused regardless of the need, he stressed.

The adjutant cited the case of a local citizen who stated when approached for a contribution to the chest fund that she has been feeding those whom the Army turns away. Chest records failed, he said, to disclose any record of a donation by this person to last year's chest fund.

Citizens, he said, who criticize relief agencies for their failure to assist all who apply for assistance, or even to assist all who are in actual want, should bear in mind that a relief agency can spend only what the citizens of the community give it to spend.

Citizens who refuse to contribute cannot expect any agency to render any service whatever in connection with problems faced by such individuals, he declared. In order that the Army, as well as other chest agencies, may have sufficient to assist all cases of actual want, Adjutant

LANDON TO TALK ON TOPICS OF DAY

TOPEKA, Kas., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Alf M. Landon, referring to his forthcoming radio speech tonight, said today "I've called a meeting tonight of the 17,000,000 who voted the Republican ticket last fall and the millions of others who are now opposed to the policies of the national administration."

The 1936 presidential candidate, declining to say what issues he will discuss, repeated his remarks will concern "important questions of the day."

The titular head of the Republican party will deliver his speech from his office in Topeka, the broadcast being carried by the Blue
