Address At Dedication Of Building Seen As Partial Answer To Critics In Stock Market Plunge.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today the government must improve and coordinate credit and other machinery to "achieve and maintain an enduring prosperity, free from the disastrous extremes of booms and depressions."

The president, speaking at ceremonies dedicating the new federal reserve building, made no direct reference to the recent tumbling stock market or down swings in business barometers.

A portion of his address, however, appeared to give a partial answer to those who have blamed administration policies for the stock market plunge.

Perfection Unattained

Recalling that the government has made many changes in its monetary and credit machinery in the last few years, Mr. Roosevelt said that "it must continue step by step to make the banking system what it should be."

"We must not complacently suppose that we have achieved perfection," he asserted, adding:

"By the banking and security exchange acts of 1933, 1934 and 1935, the federal reserve system was given increased power to improve banking conditions and to aid the government in combating practices which were evil in their results.

"Those powers have been concentrated to a greater degree than before in a single public body, so that they can be used promptly and effectively in accordance with the changing needs of the country."

The president served notice the administration plans no reversal of its banking policies, asserting: "1937 is not 1913, nor do we want to turn the hands of the clock back."

Earlier, the executive referred to creation of the reserve system in President Wilson's administration. He spoke, too, of "the courageous leadership in the congress for which the

REGULATION NEAR FOR BICYCLES AS CLUB SEEKS LAW

Council Is Asked By 20-30 To Supervise Traffic—Steps Are Taken To Have Broken Sidewalks Fixed.

Regulation of bicycle traffic was brought a step nearer last night when the 20-30 club requested the city council to promulgate a supervisory ordinance as a means of curtailing accidents.

Mayor C. C. Furnas informed the club representatives that the council had been working on a regulatory ordinance for some time and he referred the data submitted by the service organization to the public safety committee and the city attorney.

The committee was asked by the mayor to bring in a report at the next council meeting. Meantime the 20-30 club was invited to sit with the committee in drafting the necessary control ordinance.

Careful Study Made.

The 20-30 club was represented by Harry Pinneo, district governor, Al Dulara, vice-president, and Howard Hamilton, who compose a committee appointed by the club some time ago to investigate the bicycle problem.

Mr. Pinneo, spokesman for the group, said that a study of records for the past 18 months showed bicycle accidents to be increasing. He stated that the club had made a thorough study of the situation, procuring copies of ordinances in cities having bicycle regulation, checking results of the ordinance, and obtaining samples of license plates, registration cards, etc. Copies and samples of all these things were submitted to the council for study, together with a model ordinance prepared by the 20-30 club.

W. P. Stewart, chairman of the public safety committee, invited club members to confer with him regarding preparation of an ordinance, saying:

Landon Reasserts Self As Republican Head in Indictment of New Deal

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Alf M. Landon reasserted himself as an active, as well as titular, leader of the Republican party last night in a blunt indictment of the Roosevelt administration as seeking "still more power" and as a "failure" in the exercise of "too much power" already granted.

The opening sentences of his radio address set up his position with respect to party affairs:

"I have called a meeting (the radio audience) of the seventeen million men and women who voted for the Republican ticket last fall. . . . Because I held the honor of being the standard bearer of the cause for which your votes were cast, I wish to suggest ways and means by which we, the minority party, can be of outstanding service to our country."

Silent For Year

The 1936 Republican presidential nominee addressed himself also to the "millions of others who are now opposed to the policies of the national administration." He said he had been silent a year because "good taste and good government demand" that an elected official be given opportunity to establish the policies which he promised the voters.

"But now the time has come to act," he said.

Having clenching fists for emphasis as he delivered the speech from his office here, Landon used short, unequivocal words in his criticism of administration policies.

Of Mr. Roosevelt himself Landon said he is "not the man who was elected in 1932. It is apparent that Mr. Roosevelt is going through the same process that transpired in the life of every man in history who was given too much power. Power feeds on power—today, just as it did in the days of Julius Caesar."

The men were shot after they abandoned their automobile and were fleeing over a fence. Police had chased their automobile several blocks.

Patrolman M. C. Pease and Jack Hayson shot and captured the men after a speedy chase over the Montlake bridge in the university district. The trio drove into Roanoke street, which comes to a dead end. There the three leaped from their machine.
