

DEADLY HEROIN POINTS THREAT AT CANADA, U. S.

Drug Now Produced In China 15 Times More Than Legitimate Needs—Said In Japans Hands.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—(CP)—Heroin, one of the deadliest of drugs, points its greatest threats at Canada and the United States, the international world police convention was told today by Chief William J. Quinn of the San Francisco police.

Heroin's habit-forming qualities are so destructive of human tissue that the United States has barred it, even for medical purposes, since 1924. Yet it is produced in north China in 15 times the quantity called for by the world's legitimate needs, he said.

The heavy north China production, Quinn said, had followed upon the Japanese acquisition of Manchoukuo and other provinces in that area. Upon the Japanese acquisition, he declared, three of the world's largest morphine factories had sprung up, controlled by Japanese interests.

"And in two of these factories," he said, "is produced over 30 kilograms of heroin daily, over 15 times the world's needs for legitimate consumption." Heroin is a derivative of morphine, which in turn is extracted from opium.

"The anti-opium information bureau at Geneva," he said, "is authority for the statement that narcotics paved the way for the conquest of the three eastern (Chinese) provinces and that no less than 75 percent of the Japanese residing in south Manchuria are directly or indirectly connected with the drug traffic."

Pastor Tells of Christ's Lost and Found Hospice

Speaking Sunday night from the topic, "Jesus Sets Up a Lost and Found Hospice," Fred M. Weatherford, pastor evangelist at the Medford Church of the Nazarenes, read from the 15th chapter of Luke, the first ten verses. In part, he said as follows:

"The Scripture just read includes the parabolic teaching of Jesus, in which He likens the lost condition of man, spiritually speaking, to that of a lost sheep and a lost coin.

"The lost sheep and shepherd's great concern for it, in that he could not rest until it was recovered is like the Christ, the chief shepherd, who could not bear the thought of any man perishing so come to the rescue of the human race.

"Let us never lose sight of the whole drama which the coming of Christ for a lost race portrays. In His lowly birth, He came after the whole world to gather it in redemption to Himself. In His life, He taught the way of recovery to every man when He said, 'Repent and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shall be saved.' In His death on the cross, He potentially laid the world on His shoulders and brought it home with rejoicing.

"The picture of the shepherd who left the 99, who were safe in the fold, to get the one who had gone astray, is a picture both of mercy and love and, at the same time, demonstrates how one may easily go astray. It would not be a true picture to present a young man as saying, 'I am going to fool away my time, squander my money, dissipate my health and ruin as many other young lives as my influence can reach.' Such do not suspect that these developments will be the ultimate fruits of sin. Such are unwittingly towed off and led astray, Christ is the Saviour from such a life.

"The second parable pictures the lost coin. The coin is lost while bearing the King's image. Man was like that; when by sin, he forfeited the image of God. In whose likeness he was created. The coin, though out of circulation and lost to its owner, still has the value of the former worth if it can be recovered. Man, too, is like that.

"To the owner, the coin was precious. The broom and the light are both brought into service in the effort for recovery. Christ, the Light of the World, came to lead us out of the dark into the light of Salvation and to spiritual recovery. The seeking after the lost coin was rewarded with the find and rejoicing.

"The Scripture says that these two parables are like a lost and found soul; 'Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.' If the repentance of a sinner thus affects the angels in Heaven, the matter of saving a man's soul is no insignificant thing. On the other hand, it pertains that its loss is irreparable if not recovered in time."

Casey Stengel Returning As Manager Boston Bees

BOSTON, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Bob Quinn, president of the Boston Bees, picked up a telephone in his office, called Omaha, Tex., and presto! Casey Stengel was back in the major leagues.

"Listen, Casey, want to come with us next year?" bellowed Quinn yesterday as a roomful of newspapermen listened in.

"Certainly, I'd be delighted, thank you very much," came the reply—and Stengel who received $15,000 last year for not managing the Brooklyn Dodgers while Burleigh Grimes got only $7,500 for piloting them, again was a big league manager.

It was the second time Quinn lined up Casey as manager. The first was in 1934 when Quinn was with the Dodgers and was instrumental in obtaining Stengel to replace Max Carey.

One of the astonishing things about the talk was that Quinn never mentioned money or whether the job was for one year or five.

Quinn indicated Stengel would decide the fate of Hank Gowdy and Bob Smith, coaches under Manager Bill McKeehan, who resigned shortly after the world series to accept a better paying job with the Cincinnati Reds.

Stengel, no stranger to Boston, wound up his major league playing career with the Braves in 1924, after being the Giants' hero in the 1923 world series.

"And in two of these factories," he said, "is produced over 30 kilograms of heroin daily, over 15 times the world's needs for legitimate consumption."

"The anti-opium information bureau at Geneva," he said, "is authority for the statement that narcotics paved the way for the conquest of the three eastern (Chinese) provinces and that no less than 75 percent of the Japanese residing in south Manchuria are directly or indirectly connected with the drug traffic."

MONTAGUE DENIES PART IN ROBBERY; TELLS OF FLIGHT

Changed Name Because His Clothes Were Found In Suspect's Car, He Says—Relates Hollywood Life.

By George B. Loveys ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 25.—(AP)—"Mysterious" John Montague, who puzzled Hollywood pale by his reticence, told a jury today that he was innocent of a robbery charge, and that he fled New York state because his clothing was found in a holdup man's automobile.

Denying participation in the seven-year-old $700 robbery of Kin Han's Jay, N. Y., roadhouse, Montague, known in Syracuse, N. Y., as LaVerne Moore, said he was "ashamed" of his connection with the case.

Montague said his "was not and am not" ashamed of the name Moore but assumed the name John Montague in 1930 because it was "different" from his real name.

The defense rested its case after Montague's testimony, which required two hours. Summations were called for after the noon recess, with both sides predicting the case would go to the jury before nightfall.

The defendant took the stand abruptly after listening to the reading of depositions from his screen colony friends as to his good character and honesty.

Direct examination by James M. Noonan of Albany, N. Y., chief defense counsel, required only four minutes, and consisted mainly of a categorical denial by Montague that he had been in the vicinity of the Hanna roadhouse the night of the robbery.

Montague chuckled as he recalled, under his attorney's questioning, that he once had been fined $5 for stealing cherries.

"Do you remember the evening of August 4, 1930, the night of this crime?" his counsel asked. "I do," Montague replied. "Where were you?" "I was in bed at my home in Syracuse."

Cross-Quiz Vigorous Prosecutor Thomas W. McDonald began a vigorous cross-examination, turning first to the contents of a Gladstone bag, found in a wrecked motor car in which the holdup men fled from the roadhouse.

Yesterday, William Carleton, owner of the car and a confessed participant in the crime, testified the bag was placed in the machine a week before when he and Montague went to Rochester, N. Y.

Carleton said Montague did not participate in the robbery. The state claims the bag was placed in Carleton's car preparatory to a "get-away" the night of the crime. Montague, the state contends, rode in another car which was to have met the subsequently wrecked machine.

Leaves for West The defendant said he left his home in Syracuse, N. Y., the morning of August 6, 1930, went to Rochester, where he remained two days, and then went to Chicago.

"From there I went to Los Angeles," he said. "I stayed in a hotel for two days; then I found an apartment."

"When did you change your name to John Montague?" the prosecutor asked.

"In 1930," was the reply, "because my bag and belongings were found in Carleton's car."

Montague said he played his first golf game at a public course with second-hand clubs.

Montague testified that from 1930 until 1935 he was associated with "an automotive concern," selling automobiles on commission.

"What were your average earnings?" "One hundred dollars a month. Things were none too good then."

Then the prosecutor delved into Montague's social life in Hollywood, bringing from the defendant testimony that he went with "an extravagant crowd but didn't attempt to keep up my end as expensively as they."

"I traveled with them as a guest most of the time," Montague explained. "Did you know that you, Carleton and Norton had been indicted for this crime?" "I suggest that might be the reason why you didn't want your picture taken."

"Perhaps." The prosecutor referred to a trip which Montague admits making to Hanna's restaurant a week before the robbery "to make contacts for hauling liquor."

"But we never got to talk to Hanna about it," Montague testified.
