Severing Of Railway Makes Chinese Withdrawal From Chapei And Kiangwan Impossible On Route.

By LLOYD LEHRBAS SHANGHAI, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Japanese forces today occupied Tazang, a key Chinese defense position five miles north of Shanghai, and fought their way to several points on the Shanghai-Nanking railroad.

The Japanese advance followed the air and artillery bombardments which ploughed up acres of barbed wire entanglements and leveled bitterly-contested Tazang and other villages. Japanese were said to have occupied the Chengju radio station, on the western border of Chapei.

After reaching their first objectives, the Japanese columns spread out in an effort to pull the strings of the bag where stubborn Chinese still defended Chapei and Kiangwan.

The Japanese navy spokesman announced that "the entire Japanese naval air force in the Shanghai area has been mobilized to assist the army by bombarding intensively all Chinese positions facing the imperial army."

Although Japanese authorities refused to state the number of planes participating, foreign military observers counted 40 in the air at 8:30 p. m. and estimated 150 were engaged in the day-long bombardment.

Despite the obvious threat that defenders of Chapei and Kiangwan would be surrounded, the Chinese spokesman declared that "for the time being" no withdrawal orders would be issued. He said new supplies lined to the rear had been opened.
