Hollywood's "man of mystery" announces he will seek "the biggest prize in Bunkerdom."

The sobered driver of a recent death car says it was his impression that somebody else was driving his car at the time of the tragedy.

Tammany Hall, New York City's alleged iniquitous machine, is scheduled to receive a sound thumping in the election today.

The Elks' tonic is back from the hospital, somewhat the worse for general wear and tear, and once more in the road.

Merchants spent most of Monday washing windows and firmly convinced the Halloween elf, who left non-ghostly markings upon their plate glass, will never be President.

ANTI-RACKET NOTE. (Oakland Calif. Tribune) "Let each household have its radio joy to themselves, in a 'low manner' inside the home, not out in the back yards."

"If a human stood out in his yard for three hours and screamed the details of a game in person what would you think?"

"Messiahs" are springing up like mushrooms to save the poor, the workers, the aged and the farmers.

Coads at an eastern university are wearing stockings of sheer wool. Instead of silk, as a protest against Japan's invasion of China.

Duck shooting is now the order of the day. The season opened yesterday without accident.

A number of the Older Girls state they can't bring themselves to believe it's November.

A school of journalistic thought advocates the recording of more "so-called news" in the accounts of football games.

RURAL TARDINESS ENDS WELL. "When there were only three or four people in the hall at eight o'clock, the time he had announced his program would begin, Mr. Bridges, not being acquainted with Fort Rock habits, pulled on his coat and was going to leave."

How To Save Football

UNTIL all the facts regarding the Normal School "football scandal" are established final judgment should be reserved.

THE incident, regardless of its precise nature however, again calls attention to the need of housecleaning in the entire field of intercollegiate football.

We venture to say, when this Monmouth case is investigated, it will be found that the students involved did not go to the Normal to secure an education, but to play football.

Such a system is all wrong, and by encouraging professionalism, and commercializing the sport, can only lead not only to such shocking incidents as this, but eventually to the ruination of the game.

THE remedy, as we see it, is reasonably plain. Have the same scholastic requirements for entrance into an educational institution, for ALL STUDENTS, the same requirements also—and they should be high—for staying there.

HAVING done this, then establish athletic scholarships, which can be awarded to those students, who sincerely want an education, are proficient in football or other sports, but whose parents can't afford to give them a college training.

Let these scholarships be above board, and out in the open, established perhaps by the alumni, and thus do away with the devious and demoralizing system of subsidizing potential stars.

Some such system, this column is convinced, must be established sooner or later, or one of the greatest intercollegiate sports ever invented, is doomed.

Let commercialism continue to be encouraged, the amateur spirit, disregarded and college football will disappear, as college baseball has practically disappeared, and will be turned over entirely to the professionals.

Looks Like A Flop

ONLY a miracle can prevent this Brussels nine-power conference from flopping completely.

Great Britain has already passed the buck to the United States. Anthony Eden told parliament, the meeting was called at the request of Uncle Sam, and what is or isn't done will be entirely America's responsibility.

Well, the United States has declared it will consent to no settlement in the far east which will violate China's territorial integrity.

But the entire purpose of the invasion by Japan is to do just that. Japan wishes to consolidate her positions in northern China, establish a barrier against Russia, and this can't be done, without the appropriation of Chinese territory.

In other words it's the old, old story, of the "ins" putting their heads together to tell the "outs" what they have to do.

ASSUME a program of action is agreed upon, which at this writing is extremely doubtful. What then?

The United States will not go to war, to enforce the demands. Obviously England won't,—she doesn't like the situation in China, but she is far more concerned with the situation at home.

SO what is the answer? We don't know. But our guess is that after this conference things will go on in Europe and the far east, very much as before.

And that is what, we believe all Europe wishes to avoid. So nothing promises to come out of the Belgian conference which will threaten even a little step toward it.

SO what is the answer? We don't know. But our guess is that after this conference things will go on in Europe and the far east, very much as before.

Times have changed since the days of the Tartars, and Japan is far smarter in a perfectly ruthless and realistic sense, than we fear most people realize.

Change. Just going through the "change," suffers terribly from headaches in back and top of head and worries so every article will not live through it and is of course very nervous.

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

ACCORDING to the department of commerce, the national income of the United States in 1936 was $69,799,000,000.

IF YOU will divide $3 billion dollars by 126 million people, you will get a quotient of $500.

THAT, of course, would include everybody—workers and non-workers, wage earners and dependents, new-born babes and centenarians.

WE HEAR a lot about unequal distribution of income in this country, but when we break it right down into cold figures the distribution isn't so terribly unequal, after all.

OF THE national income last year, manufacturing accounted for 23 per cent, the largest single share.

Trade took 12.9 per cent, the service industries 12.2 per cent and agriculture 9.4 per cent.

We used to be an agricultural nation. In 1936, the share of manufacturing in the national income was two and a half times the share of agriculture.

IN 1929, labor (in all the industries) got 65.5 per cent of the national income of 80 billion dollars.

Communications

The Green Apple Eaters To the Editor: "Must Fight for Peace," the reprint from the Rotary magazine, written by Frank E. Gannett and appearing in your editorial column in Sunday's issue is unscientific.

Mr. Gannett thinks that "public opinion" would put an end to war. Why doesn't it stop Mussolini and Hitler from carrying out their invasion in Spain? Why didn't it keep America out of World War?

This demand for colonies that we hear so much about lately is also the bunk. Public opinion, it is believed, has never demanded expansion at others' expense.

Modern wars, "capitalistic enterprises" are simply efforts to make the profit system profitable.

incorporating opponents who, if elected, would immediately join in the Democratic organization of congress and support most of the New Deal issues.

There is talk again of a left-wing revolt in the New Deal by next election. Not present, or immediate, but indicated.

It was announced that it will be "repealed" until the women—and it develops that there are many—who work for less than the minimum wage will get an increase.

Critics of the president contrast this long delay with the speed with which the "big fellows" stopped paying their processing taxes when the supreme court held them illegal.

Indians may face a tri-party battle for the senatorship next year. It is understood that Senator Van Nuys has just about decided to march under his own banner.

Just before the nominating convention he will, according to reports, declare that the New Deal has "jobbed" him, that he won't present his name to the Democrats at all, and that all good Hoosiers will be permitted to elect him regardless of party.
