Meanwhile, whether the Guffey bill can muster the support of labor is a question. It isn't that labor doesn't like the bill, which follows the lines of the railway labor mediation law. But a union with an organization fight on its hands thrives on strikes. The Guffey bill recognizes collective bargaining, but makes it mandatory that a "status quo" be kept while mediation is going on, which means fewer strikes and therefore less chance to organize.

Probably the least worried folk in Washington over the coming visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are the British ambassador, Lady Lindsay and the embassy staff.

The charming prince may be a former king-emperor to you and me, but he is simply a member of the British royal family, no more no less. To Sir Ronald Lindsay, his majesty's envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary in Washington. To the highly civilized and perfectly correct members of the British diplomatic service, that painful event which occurred "at long last" simply hasn't occurred.

There are, on the other hand, a number of Americans who are much less at ease. They are the secret service men in particular and officials generally who are responsible for the Duke's welfare while he's housing in America.

It will be recalled that, some years ago, two American commoners, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, nearly got pulled to pieces by their loving fans in staid old England.

The duke and duchess are objects of no less interest and curiosity to Americans. This country is somewhat larger than England and the visiting nobles will cover a lot more territory than the London bobby usually takes care of so well but didn't during the Fairbanks' visit.

That is why, until the distinguished guests are safely back on shipboard again, the American policeman's life will not be a happy one.

The spankee may not know yet, but labor's non-partisan league is getting ready to do one of its first official spanking jobs—something not so new in the political world.

Frank Martel, chairman of the Michigan unit of the league, is reported to be the culprit. His political misdemeanor was sponsoring a lot of resolutions in favor of the wrong man (not C.I.O.'s candidate for mayor of Detroit), who turned out to be the right man with the voters.

Mr. Martel may not have heard from Washington yet, but C.I.O. headquarters is said to be pretty hot under the collar about it. If he has not done it already, Mr. Martel had better put on an extra pair of pants or hunt for a pillow.

When the report of the maritime commission is made public next week it is hinted that some ardent believers in an efficient merchant marine will look in vain for a few "crack downs" on the ship owner which they
