CONGRESS NEAR READY FOR CONSIDERATION OF NEW FARM MEASURES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Congress was ready—almost—to get down to work today on crop control legislation.

Both senate and house continued the same sort of wordy debate that produced no action during the first week of the special congressional session, but the senate had a farm bill to start on tomorrow.

A weary house sub-committee also wound up its discussions over an agriculture bill to establish an ever-normal granary and stabilize farm prices.

Majority Leader Rayburn (D. Tex.) said word from the committee was that the legislation would be ready for the house by tonight, "certainly tomorrow." He predicted debate would begin by the end of the week.

The house bill, Chairman Jones (D. Tex.) of the house committee announced, would provide compulsory control, through marketing quotas, for wheat. A like provision for corn was approved by the committee last week.

RESPITE FROM RAIN SENDS RIVERS DOWN FROM FLOOD STAGE

(By the Associated Press)

Flood threats subsided in western Oregon today after windy skies stopped their downpours Sunday but a weather bureau prediction of continued rain tonight and tomorrow indicated only a temporary respite.

The Rogue and Willamette rivers went down slowly. The Willamette was 8.3 feet above normal at Portland but 10 feet under flood stage and a crest of 10 feet was expected tonight or tomorrow.

In eastern Oregon, snow blocked the mountain regions. A crew of 45 men clearing the right of way between Fish Lake and Imnaha, near Halfway, said the snowfall was so heavy their tents were crushed and it took them about three days to plough through the 20 miles of snow. The 44 inches measured at this time was an unusual depth at this time.

State highway department predicted continued rain would close many highways. Seventeen inches of rain already covers the coast highway between Coquille and Bandon but this was caused in part by a washed out dike. Snow closed the Willamette and Santiam routes and the North Santiam may be closed shortly. The McKenzie pass was open.

Daughters of Revolution Mark Grave of Daughter Of Revolutionary Soldier

Daughters of the American Revolution placed a bronze marker at the grave of Lydia Stephens Briggs, believed to be one of the only two daughters of Revolutionary war soldiers buried in Oregon, at Kary last Thursday with the Rogue River chapter of Grand Pass conducting the ceremony. The marker was unveiled by Miss Helen Floyd, descendant of Lydia Briggs, a resident of the Illinois valley from 1833 to her death in 1871.

State Regent Mrs. Boone G. Harding, Regent Mrs. H. E. Armstrong and Past Regent Mrs. P. J. Newman, all of Medford, attended the ceremonies and others assembling at the grave were Mrs. Lucile Floyd, regent of Rogue River chapter, who was in charge of the ceremony, and the following other Rogue River chapter members: Mrs. Catherine Gray, Mrs. Isabelle VanCott, Mrs. Sarah Jane Robinson, Mrs. Wm. F. Hayden, Mrs. Alice Grimbes, Mrs. George Eaton, and Mrs. Lulu Voorhies.

The state regent said she knows of only one other daughter of a Revolutionary war soldier buried in Oregon.

Lydia Stephens Briggs was born at Triga Point, Penn., October 1, 1791, the daughter of Captain Ira Stephens and Sybil Ransom, daughter of Captain Samuel Ransom who was slain during the massacre of Wyoming, Penn., under Colonel Denison, at Forty-Port. He was buried with 10 other officers near the site of the memory of those who fell in this battle. His name heads the list of those killed, engraved upon the tablet.

Captain Stephens served in the Continental line, enlisting in 1775. He served seven years and his discharge was signed by General Washington.

Lydia Stephens married David Briggs at Athens, October 4, 1810. He passed away and was buried there.

A son, George Edwin, an only child, decided to bring his wife and four children west in 1851. Lydia's brothers and sisters were very much opposed to her coming west but her fondness for her son and grandchildren made her change her mind at the last minute and she accompanied her son.

Mrs. Florence Hart of Menlo Park, Calif., a granddaughter, wrote: "The trip took about a year. They came by way of the Isthmus of Panama. They went by boat down the Atlantic and were in a storm at sea and the boat was nearly wrecked. They were weeks overdue and there was no one to meet the boat when it finally landed. They had difficulty in securing horses to ride to a lake which they crossed in another boat. They managed to get a few horses for the women to ride and their children were carried on their backs. They finally reached the Pacific ocean and took a boat for San Francisco, then a very small place with the houses built on stilts. They arrived in Crescent City in the late fall and were obliged to remain in the coast town until snow left the mountains and the trip to the new home near what is now Holland was long and tiresome. Mother's father had built a good log house which burned to the ground only a few years ago. Grandma Briggs and Lydia Briggs were the only white women in that part of the country for some time. The Indians were around and the children were kept near the house. When the Indians went on the war path during the Rogue River Indian wars, a fort was built at the ranch and other families that lived in that section were forced there. Grandma Lydia was very religious and read her Bible a great deal. The family records are kept in this Bible."

(It was understood the further right to march troops through the settlement would be demanded by Japan.)

MORE POSITIVE ACTION TO END CONFLICT ASKED BY DR. WELLINGTON KOO

BRUSSELS, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate to the Brussels conference, today appealed to the participating powers for more "positive action" to end the Chinese-Japanese conflict than "pious professions of faith in the pledged word."

He urged the powers to reconsider a proposed report which calls for indefinite suspension of the parity and declared "an abortive ending of this conference will unwittingly augment the already prevailing sense of insecurity."

The conferees, nevertheless, proceeded to study the report which reviews the conference's efforts to settle the Chinese-Japanese conflict and concludes that the efforts have failed.

Declaring the conference had had "a striking lack of fruitful results," Dr. Koo said the Chinese delegation reserved the right to propose amendments to the report after consultation with the Chinese government.
