But within that meek submission, Lay the secret and the key To the soul's resurrection And to immortality. Meek compassion, love eternal. These endured when night was gone. Resurrected with the sunrise To illuminate each dawn. Just as Calvary's darkness, surely, Thus pressed a newer day When the hosts of death were vanquished And the stone was rolled away, Easter points to an hereafter Where the ages yield their toll And with life and death united In the morning of the soul. Just as Calvary's darkness, surely, Thus pressed a newer day When the hosts of death were vanquished And the stone was rolled away, Easter points to an hereafter Where the ages yield their toll And with life and death united In the morning of the soul. Freeman Chase Leslie.

But within that meek submission, Lay the secret and the key To the soul's resurrection And to immortality. Meek compassion, love eternal. These endured when night was gone. Resurrected with the sunrise To illuminate each dawn. Just as Calvary's darkness, surely, Thus pressed a newer day When the hosts of death were vanquished And the stone was rolled away, Easter points to an hereafter Where the ages yield their toll And with life and death united In the morning of the soul.
