

WEEK-END FISHING TO BE PRODUCTIVE, SURVEY DISCLOSES

Good Catches Are Reported As Conditions in General Improve — Survey Shows Flower Profusion

The following recreational bulletin was issued today by Rogue River national sport headquarters:

"The sportsmen should find good fishing conditions during the coming week-end.

"In the Union Creek district the Rogue river is clear but high between Trail and Prospect. Steelhead are rising to spinners and reports of several catches have been made during the week. Good catches of trout are being made between Prospect and Trail. Bait fishing for eastern brook and Dolly Varden in Copco dam, one mile west of Prospect, is reported as good.

"Bait fishing in Elk creek is reported as fair. The road up Trail creek is open to the Swingle mill, six miles from the highway. The road up Elk creek is open from the highway to the Bitter Lick bridge, a distance of about 12 miles. All forest roads are closed in the Union creek area. Maintenance work in the forest camps at Union creek, Natural Bridge and Farewell Bend is being done, and the camps will be usable this week-end. Squaw Lake Productive"

"Roads in the lower elevations of the Applegate district are in good condition but the roads leading to the higher elevations still remain closed because of snow. Fishing in all streams is poor because of high water. Several limit catches of trout were made during the week at Squaw lake. The road is closed to a point 1 1/2 miles from the lake. The bridge at Dividend Bar has been repaired. Bait fishing with worms has given the best results in Squaw lake.

"The Mount Ashland road is open eight miles out of Ashland. It is possible to drive to the ski run. The road up Thompson creek is passable and it is possible to make the trip over to Carberry by that road. Carberry creek is too high for good fishing.

"The Fish lake road is open and in good condition to Pole Bridge creek. This leaves about one hour's walk to the lower end of the lake, a distance of about 2 1/2 miles. It is not advisable to ski into the lake. The trail is well packed down and the ground is open in spots. The Imnaha road is open to a point within two miles of the guard station.

"Flowers Profuse

"The Copco dam on the south fork can be reached by way of Prospect. Fishing is reported as being fair in both south fork and middle fork. The water is still high in Big Butte but some fair catches have been reported. Fly fishing has been fair in Fourbit creek.

"Wild flowers around Butte Falls and on the Butte Falls-Prospect road are abundant. Purple violets, white lamb's tongues, bird bills, lady slippers, red bells and wild strawberry plants are blossoming now."

important command at the president's bedside, between presidential gowns of breakfast coffee and the gay shouts and joyous cries of little Slatie and Buzzie Dall, who kept interrupting their grandfather by stuffing their little hands in his mouth.

Acheson lasted just six months. He and the president came to the parting of the ways on gold policies, which he did not consider constitutional. When he was summoned to the White House to be handed the executive order on gold, he immediately told the president that he could not promulgate the order without an opinion from the justice department. The president replied that he had a favorable opinion. Acheson asked to see it. The president said that the opinion had been given verbally by the attorney general.

"I'm sorry, Mr. President," said Acheson, "but there is no opinion from the justice department which is not a written opinion."

"That was the end of Acheson, who was treated thereafter as a condemned criminal might have been.

After Acheson came Henry Morgenthau, then Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, then Roswell Magill. Neither Coolidge nor Magill had to go through quite as much as Acheson, but their life was far from placid.

Coolidge, a conservative Boston banker, expected to serve as a financial technician. Unfortunately, his political instincts were so horrified by the goings-on in the New Deal that a cat on a griddle would have had more ease and peace of mind. When Coolidge returned at last to Boston, to vote Republican in 1936, Magill was brought from Columbia to reform the tax system. And now he, too, is going, with a bad taste in his mouth, and the tax system just about as dreadful as it ever was.

It was Secretary Morgenthau who first conceived the scheme of handing the black act to John Hanes. The treasury roster has lately been denuded of big names, and no doubt Morgenthau hoped that Hanes would dress his office up a bit.

Morgenthau took the notion to the president, who consented to Hanes' transfer from the SEC on condition that Hanes be permitted to continue his peace-making between business and the New Deal. And thus Hanes is expected to do double duty, as a hard-working treasury official and an intermediary in the current civil war. In fact, it looks as though he might be worse off than any of the unfortunates who went before him.

Hanes is charming, remarkably clever and exceedingly sensible. Yet an insurance actuary would give a better chance of survival to a man with a rattlesnake in either pocket, standing in the crossfire of a machine gun battery.

WHOLESALE RATES ARE PROPOSED BY BONNEVILLE CZAR

Ross Advocates $14.50 Per Kilowatt Year for Prime Power for Resale and for Use of Purchasers

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(AP)—The federal power commission today made public nine schedules of wholesale rates which Administrator J. D. Ross proposed to charge for electricity generated at Bonneville dam in the Pacific northwest.

Ross submitted the schedules as the first step in the government's plan to provide cheap electricity to consumers in Oregon, Washington and Idaho. They must be approved by the commission before becoming effective.

Six of the schedules which are being studied by the commission pertain to the sale of power at or in the vicinity of the Bonneville power plant.

Ross proposed that $14.50 per kilowatt year be charged for prime power for resale and for purchasers' use. He fixed a schedule of $9.50 per kilowatt year for at site secondary power for the same purpose.

Purchasers wishing at site surplus power for resale or for their own use would be charged 2.4 cents per kilowatt day.

The remaining three schedules would provide for the sale of prime power, secondary power and surplus power at stations at various points along Bonneville's own transmission system, to purchasers wishing the energy for resale.

For this type of service Ross would charge $17.50 per kilowatt year for prime power, $11.50 per kilowatt year for secondary power and 2.8 cents per kilowatt day for surplus power.
